

How Sam Hooked Lucy's Gown.

Well, just as I was ready to start away down comes Lucy to the kitchen room, with arms behind her head, a fixin' of the hooks and eyes.

"Man alive," says she, "are you here yet? I thought you was off gamin' an hour ago. Who'd thought you was here?"

"Gamin'?" said I. "Lucy, my gamin' is over; I shan't go no more now; I shall go home. I agree with you; shiverin' along under a wet bush is no fun; but if Lucy was there—"

"Get out," says she, "don't talk nonsense, Sam, and just fasten the hook and eye of my frock, will you?"

She turned round her back to me. I took the hook in one hand, and the eye in the other; but with and seas! my eyes fairly snapped; I never saw such a neck since I was raised. It sprung right off breast and shoulder fair round, and then tapered up to the head like a swan's, the complexion would beat the most delicate white and red rose that was ever seen. Dick, it made me all eyes! I just stood stock still; I couldn't move a finger if I was to die for it!

"What ails you, Sam," says she, "that you don't hook it?"

"Why," says I, "Lucy dear, my fingers is all thumbs, that's a fact; I can't handle such little things as you can."

"Well, come," says she, "make haste, that's a dear boy; mother will be in directly." And at last I shut both eyes, and fastened it; and when I had done, she says:

"There's one thing I must say, Lucy."

"What's that?" says she.

"That you out stump all Connecticut to show such an unrefined neck as you have; I never saw the best of it in all of my born days; it's the most—"

"And you may stamp the State, too," said she, "to produce such another bold, forward, impudent, unmanly tongue as you have! So there now, so get along with you!"

The Baltimore and Chicago platforms agree in demanding a change of Cabinet, with this difference: The Baltimore people proposed to turn out Seward, Stanton and Blair, while Chicago says kick out the whole gang, with the "royal jester" at their head.

Henry IV., of France, blood a brief reply. He once met an ecclesiastic, to whom he said: "Whence do you come? Where are you going? What do you want?" The ecclesiastic replied instantly: "From Bourges—to Paris—a benefice." "You shall have it," replied the monarch.

A fellow went, some time since, into the store of a fashionable dressmaker: "Have you any skirts?" he asked, with a serious emphasis.

"Plenty of them."

"What is the lowest price per cord?" asked the chap.

"A cord!" exclaimed the woman, in astonishment.

"Yes, about a cord. Up in our diggins the patients lie all out. I see you advertise corded skirts, and I thought, while my hand was in, I would take what you had corded up.

The woman looked reflective.

"I wonder where those cords are going?" sighed Flora, positively, as she pointed with her thin delicate finger to the heavy funeral masses that floated lazily in the sky. "I think they are going to thunder," exclaimed her little brother.

"I think I now see a new feature in this case," as the lawyer said when his client informed him that he had plenty of money.

Avoid the acquaintance of a woman who talks loudly in a public conveyance.

The more you stroke a cat, the higher she lifts her tail.

Self-love exaggerates our faults as well as our virtues.

Never attempt to beat a man with his own weapons.

Men generally do the opposite of what they profess.

NATHANIEL MAYFAIR, Esq., Brooklyn, Kings Co., N. Y. June 15, 1864.

THE peculiar taint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the constitutions of multitudes of men.

It either produces or is produced by an enfeebled vitality of the blood, wherein that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain the vital forces in their vigorous action, and leaves the system to fall into disorder and decay. The scrofulous contamination is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered digestion from unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children." The diseases which it originates take various names, according to the organ it attacks. It may require the same remedy, viz. purgation and invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood, and these dangerous distempers leave you. With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that "life of the flesh" healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Purify the blood, and these dangerous distempers leave you. With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that "life of the flesh" healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

contamination is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered digestion from unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children." The diseases which it originates take various names, according to the organ it attacks. It may require the same remedy, viz. purgation and invigoration of the blood.
