Shameful Proceedings.

GEN. ROUSSEAU, one of the most gallant and successful soldiers in the Union sat in his seat in Congress, while the Republican majority permitted the reverend ruffian, Grinnell to insult him most wantonly, by doubting his courage and expressing doubts as to which side Rousseau belonged during the rebellion. For this Rousseau caned his slanderer, and the Abolitionists, of the House, up to Saturday last, had it under consideration whether to expel him or not. They finally concluded to censure and let him go.

How shamefully too these fanatics act in regard to the President of the United States. When speaking of him they can not find language coarse enough to suit their purpose, and yet no one calls them to order. In their caucuses last week their language was so gross and violent, as to cause one of their own organs, the Evening Post, to openly, reprimand them in this way.

"We have had, during the last six months, several lamentable and disgusting displays of intemperate language; but they have been by individuals. In the Republican caucus it would seem that, with two or three honored exceptions, members of Congress tried who should indulge to the greatest extent in language so intemperate, so indecent, so disgusting, that, as we read, the speakers seem rather an assemblage of pot-house brawlers than grave and responsible members of Congress.

As a specimen of the violent language of the present Congress we might cite Stevens' pious wish that the people of the South were safely domiciled in the "Penitentiary of hell" or to the remarks of Farnsworth of Illinois, who spoke in this way:

"The President was a traitor to the party and the country, and that he was ready for any measure, however desperate, which would put the government into the hands of the rebels. What his schemes were he did not know, but he had been told on high authority that Mr. Seward had said that this Congress would never meet again until the Southern States were restored to their rights of representation in Congress."

This furious fellow in his allusion to Seward lied openly and he knew it; he has been told so frequently since, but he, like Grinnell, takes nothing back. Boutwell, too, of Massachusetts, could not permit the opportunity to pass without declaring the President as infamous as the worst of the rebels. He said:

"He believed Andrew Johnson to be just as thoroughly a traitor as Jeff. Davis, and that nothing could save the country from destruction but the most prompt and effective preparations for every emergency. He believed an attempt would be made to force the rebels into Congress, and the Philadelphia Convention was part of the scheme. The battle, in effect, had already begun, and if resistance was not made, the President would take possession of the Capitol. Any such attempt must and would be resisted by force." [Mr. Boutwell's remarks were loudly applauded.]

These fellows are mere madmen. If President Johnson were the knave these Abolitionists would have him, would he take ground against their proceedings? If he were not acting from conscientious convictions, he need only sign all the bills passed by Congress, and he could put in his time as President in the happiest manner. Instead of this, however, he fights both houses, in the face of their triumphant two-thirds, who are able to defy his vetoes? If he were not a most rigid and scrupulous Chief Magistrate, he would act very indifferently from what he has. But if he were the vilest wretch that ever filled official station, members of Congress are not excusable in applying to him the language we have quoted; it disgraces Congress and corrupts the public. Instead of its damaging the President, it only hurts his office. For, as the Evening Post, observes if the violent spirit displayed by members of Congress could animate the whole people, our national existence would be very near its close. It is not such intemperance and intolerance which the nation requires in its leaders; they only make government impossible.—Pittsburgh Post.

Uriah.

Persons rejoicing in this name have always been more or less unlucky. He of the Old Testament was sent to the front and came to grief. He of the novel was a victim of "humility," and he of the Inquirer has been soundly thrashed in the Capitol, not like the Reverend Grinnell, for words spoken in debate, but for words of secret slander written to some newspaper or communicated to some committee. While we wish it clearly understood that we disapprove of personal chastisement, we must say that, from his antecedents, our sympathy with Uriah is not excessive. Uriah—we mean Mr. Uriah Painter—is an expert at defamation, and was a pet witness against General McClellan before the Wade-Gooch Committee of 1862. Covode was his special interrogator, and his testimony will be found extending over twelve pages of that dreary record, its object being to prove that the brave soldier of Antietam was a coward and a fool. Painter was, as he swore, a correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, then an enthusiast in General McClellan's cause. There is some bad poetry which Yankeeism is very fond of quoting about the wheels of time grinding, and grinding very fine, which Uriah must have thought of as he lay sprawling and screaming for help.

A SHOT AT THE "D. D."—The following shot from Thad. Stevens' needle gun, at the gentleman who went into Pennsylvania the other day and announced himself as a candidate for Senatorial honors, will be appreciated by all who are familiar with "my writings in my two newspapers, both daily." Mr. Stevens addressed the following letter to gentlemen who proposed to make him a Senator:

GENTLEMEN: I have received your kind letter asking me to allow the use of my name as a candidate for United States Senator.

I believe that office (when tendered) is not to be declined without some strong reason. But it has always been my opinion that no man should make himself a candidate for it, or take any part in the canvass. A person fit for that position ought to be discoverable without notice from himself or recognized agent. This, however, is a matter of taste about which there is a difference of opinion, and is not intended as a criticism upon others, but only to account for my own course.

Thanking you for your constant friendship, I am your obedient servant, &c.

THE harvesting of the crops in the West has caused the bottom of the grain market in Chicago to drop out. Millers are grinding new wheat, and the delusion of a scarcity has completely vanished. Speculators have suffered severely, as they deserve to.

A SAVAN connected with the Garden of Plants in Paris has carried three billiard balls constantly in his bosom for the past seven months wrapped up in a flannel waistcoat, supposing that they were crocodile eggs, and that they would hatch by that process.

THE FENIAN RAID.—The Canadian Commission appointed to ascertain the amount of injury committed during the late raids of the Fenians, report that in the east it will amount to from $15,000 to $25,000, and in the west from $6,000 to $10,000.

DANGEROUS CURRENCY.—It is a notorious fact that fully nine-tenths of the fractional currency now in circulation are counterfeit. Some are artistically finished and well calculated to deceive, while others are base and palpable frauds at first glance. Paper money is bad enough at best, but the public ought to be protected from deception in the fractional notes, and the best way to accomplish this is to come back to the hard dimes and the old nickel.

A HOME THIRST.—We heard one of these defunct patriots who blowed so hard during the war, make a terrible onslaught on old Andy. He declared that Andrew Johnson was a disgrace to the country, and that he ought to be impeached. "And who are you?" said a soldier standing by. "Who am I? why I am a loyal man, and I do not believe in anything that the Copperheads endorse." "Did you fight in this war?" "No," whimpered the old reprobate. "I did not go because I could not leave my business, but I loaned my money to the Government."

"Yes, we know you did," said the soldier: "We understand you now. You are one of those loyal men who hissed on the dogs of war but were particular not to go yourself. You shouted treason to every one who did not agree with you, urged poor men to go and leave their families, you got exempted from the draft—and when the government went begging for money you gave yours—and charged usury interest, you did, you miserable old hypocrite! Don't you talk to me about Johnson. Clear—and old 7-30 exemption went kicking down the street as if he saw a rebel raid in the distance. The fact is, the people are finding out the bottom of the loyalty of those men. It don't suit them. Usury, bonds and the whole thing."

A NEW OFFICE CREATED.—Congress has created the office of Steward of the President's household, the incumbent of which is required to give bonds for the safe keeping of the government furniture and property. This office was rendered necessary by the incidents attending the removal of the wife of the first Republican President of the United States from the White House to their own house. In noticing the creation of the stewardship and the cause thereof, a contemporary asks: "Who will dare to tell the truth about this 'wholesale plundering'? Who loaded these boxes by the score and let them down by a fall, rigged at the back of the White House? Who had those packages put up which Mr. Stanton ordered to be returned? Who had the linen of the White House cut up for under-clothing? Who packed up and carried off those handsome vases of the Blue Room? Who stole the gold spoons purchased in Mr. Monroe's administration and safe until Mr. Lincoln's? Is this disloyal to tell?"
