The Beauty of Old Age.

I often think each tottering form, That limps along in life's decline, Once bore a heart, as young, as warm, As full of idle thoughts, as mine; And each has had its dream of joy, Its own unequaled, pure romance; Commencing when the blushing boy First thrilled at lovely woman's glance.

And could each tell his tale of youth. Would think its scenes of love evince More passion, more unearthly truth, Than any tale, before or since,

Yes, they could tell of tender lays, At midnight perned in classic shades, Of days more bright than modern days, And maids more fair than modern maids.

Of whispers in a willing ear; Of kisses on a blushing check; Each kiss, each whisper, far too dear Our modern lips to give or speak Of passions to, notimely crossed-Of passions slighted or betrayed-Of kindred spirits early lost,

And buds that blossom but to fade, Of beaming eyes and tresses gay; Elastic form and noble brow,

And forms that have all passed away, And left them what we see them now. And is it thus-is human love So very light and frail a thing?

And must youth's brightest vision move Forever on time's restless wing ? Must all the eyes, that still are bright, And all the lips that talk of bliss,

And all the forms so fair to sight, Hereafter only come to this? Then what are all earth's treasures worth If we at length must leave them thus-If all we value most on earth, Ere long must fade away from us?
