FARSWELL. From Moore's Rural New Yorker. Past the hours are fleeing, mother, Must I my farewell so soon, Must I have the home of childhood Bre my life has reached its noon?

O, my weary heart is breaking. Tears have ceased to bring relief; Words may never tell the anguish Of this fint and bitter grief. Mother, fold you arms about me Once again ere I depart; Let me hear your tones of music Kalling gently on my heart. Oft, when in the land of strangers. I shall miss that voice so mild ; Wilt thou still at eve and morning Pray for blessings on thy child O, when thoughtfulness come o'er thee, Shall I ever claim a tear? Now upon thy heart I'm resting-Shall my heart be ever here? Sarely thou wilt ne'er forget me. Though I have been vain and wild O. I know thy gentle spirit Blosses still thy wayward chlid' But I'l dash away the tear-drop-, And my lips shall wear a smile, Though my heart is madly throbbing

'Nonth.its weight of grief the while. 'Tis the world's first bitter lesson. Far from home and thee to go; We shall meet again, my mother. Bat, ph! shall we meet below? A Little Child Shall Lead Him.

Here is something pretty about the power and might of little children, from the pen of some gentle hearted lady unknown :- "One cold winter morning I looked into a miliner's shop, and there I saw a hale, hearty, and well browned young fellow from the country, with his long cart Water whip, and a lion shag coat holding up some little matter and turning it about in his great fist .----And what do you suppose it was? A baby's bonnet! A little, soft, blue satin hood, with a swan's down border, white as the frill of rich blond around the edge. By his side stood a very pretty woman, holding with no small pride, the baby, for evidently it was the baby. And one could ' read the fact in every glance, as they looked at each other, and at the little hood, and then at the large, blue, unconscious eye, and fat dimpled ! cheeks of the little one. It was evident that dynamic are ind gynamic are so the set of the little one. It was evident that a gynamic and the set of the little one. They tear in prevention of the part child shall lead him." Poor little children, they bring and teach us human beings, more good than they get in return. How often does the in-fant, with its soft check and helpless hand, awaken a mother from worldliness and egotism to a whole world of new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the teach and and the contract of the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft of the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft new and higher feeling.— How aften diverting to the soft new and higher feeling. to a whole world of new and higher feeling.— How often does the mother repay this by doing her best to wipe off, even before the time, the dow and resh simplicity of childhood, and make the daughter too soon a woman of the world, as she had been. The hardened heart of the worldy man is touched by the guilelest tones and simple carresses of his son, but he repays it in time, by imparting to his boy all the crooked tricks and hard ways, and callous max-ims, which have undone himself. Go to the jail—the! penitentiary—and find there the wretched, most sullen, brutal, and hardened. Then look at your infant son; such to some Then look at your infant son; such to some mother was this man. That hard hand was ROLLING Hoops and Jumping Ropes for lutte girls Just re and delicate; that rough voice was tender "HEETINGS. There was a time when his heart, soft and unknown, might have been opened to questions of his Maker, and been sealed with the seal of heaven. But harsh "perfor hands seized it, and all is over with him forever. So of the tender, weeping shild-he is made the callous, beartless man; of the sneering scepticof the beautiful and modest, the shameless and abandoned-and this is what the world does for the little. There was a time when the Divine One stood upon the earth, and little children sought towiraw near him. | But harsh human beings stood between him and them, forbidding their represent. Ah, has it always been so? Do not even we, with our hard and unsubdued feeling, our wordly and unscriptural habits and maxims, stand like a dark screen between our child and its Saviour, and keep, even from the choice bud of our heart, the radiance which might unfold it for pandise? "Suffer little children to come un-to me, and forbid them not," is still the voice of the Son of God; but the cold world still closes around and forbids. When of old deciples would ques-tion their Lord of the higher mysterios of his kingdom, he took a child and set him in the midst as a sign of him who would be greatest in the kingdom of heaven. That gentle teacher still acts the little child in the midst of us! Woulds thou know, O parent, what is that faith which unlocks heaven? Go not to wrangling polemics or creeds, or forms of theology, but draw to thy bosom thy little one, read in that clear and trusting eye the lesson of eternal life.
