True Freedom and how to Gain It.
We want no dog, no slavish rag,
No Liberty to fight;
We want no mass of murderous gang,
No Liberty to fight;
Our spirit and rights are granted words,
The mind our happy guide;
We want no such rights before,
And so we shall again.

THE RASH MARRIAGE.

CHAPTER I.
The morning dawned bright and clear,
The sun shone brightly on the sea;
The birds sang sweetly in the air,
The wind blew soft and free;
The young man sat in his room,
His heart was full of love and pain;
He thought of her who had been his,
And how she had been his again.

Champlain was visible even at that distance...
And then, if it was evening, you surely remember...
The young man sat in his room, his heart was full of love and pain...
He thought of her who had been his, and how she had been his again...
The morning dawned bright and clear, the sun shone brightly on the sea...
