THE RASH MARRIAGE.

BY MRS. JULIA R. DORR.
CHAPTER VII.
Her lips to mine how often had she joined,
How many times to please me had she tried.

husband's voice—it was so changed—so hoarse—
and the simple words seemed to be spoken with such an effort, but after standing irresolu-

worlds now, were they yours, if you could undo this deed, and be free to place your hand where your heart is.

sanctity in marriage was there it is hallowed by a mutual love. We cannot meet merely as friends—we must be more or nothing. It is bet-

its most malignant form, had laid its withering hand upon their darling, and in less than twenty-four hours they knew that there was no hope—driven you to this, my beloved, by my harshness and cruelty, and now my punishment is greater than I can bear.
