THE POET'S ASPIRATIONS.

I ask not wealth and honors, Nor proud and broad domain: Nor band of liveried truckling slaves To form a courtly train. I only ask and pray to be The post of the worlding reign, That Virtue may sur hurled.

Vice in the description of the second Lenter not the lists of fame, But deem such feats too small. I only ask a poet's power To charm the human mind. Converting harsh and vicious thoughts To those more pure, and kind.

That on the sparkling jeweled throne And to the cottage small . My lays of love and peace may he A welcome guest to all. To teach contentment to the poor By pradent thrift to save; To claim for man fraternity. And freedom for the slave.

Could I but wield so blest a power. Such happiness could see, No honors that the world can give Would have a charm for me. No gift that God to man can grant Would have for me such worth. Compared to what he may achieve. Who makes a Heaven of Earth. 1853. GEORGE G. W. MOBGAN.

A Touching Incident.

In one of the beautiful villages of Westchest-In one of the beautiful villages of Westchester of the origination of a busband, more space of the s er county, not many months since, there resided management of an itenerant evangelist. For some time she gradually grew worse and worse, and began to lose all interest in her family and in society, and all hope. In vain was she pray-ed and labored with. Her husband used all the hopeful and endearing appears within his power, but with little beneficial<sup>1</sup> result. She lost all relish for life, and grew wan, and weeping day after day over the forlorn forebodings of her mind. Her children at times seemed to recall her back to herself, but it was mournful to see how she would take them in in her arms how she would take them up in her arms, wrap them to her bursting boson kiss them and than them to her bursting boson kiss them and than them to her bursting bosom, kiss them, and then wet their cheeks with the burning tears she poured out in view of the awful thought that she might at last be separated from them forever. Her melancholy grew deeper, till it broke out in despair and madness. The beautiful, lovely wife and mother, became a wild manfac, rolling her eyes with fiery glare, tearing her hair, shrieking with frantic horror, and seeking the bloody knife for the destruction of her nearest and deares friends. With a bleeding heart, the stricken husband was compelled to abandon all hope of
