Horrid Murders on Long Island.

About twelve o'clock on Friday night, two servant girls in the employ of Mr. James Wickham, at Gutchogue, in Southold fown, L. I., were awakened by the cries of some of the inmates of the house, and on listening, heard repeated blows, as if some body was being struck on the head, and also heard Mrs. Wickham exclaim, "Nicholas, don't kill him, don't kill him." Upon this, the girls supposing that Mr. Wickham was being murdered, got out of an attic window and fled to the nearest neighbors, and gave the alarm. The house was immediately visited, and presented a horrible spectacle.
