TO AUTUMN.

BY SEATON.

Season of mist and mellow fruitfulness,
Close thou with me in solitude,
Crisping with thin, bare, boughs,
And with the rattle of the leaves
To lend with apples the most cottage room,
And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core,
To swell the plump, and plump the hazel shells
With a sweet kernel; to set budding now,
And fill all flowers for the bees;—but they Shall hear the muffled drums, shall see the
Faintly that warm days will never come,
For summer has o'erbrimmed their clay cells.

Who hath not seen the gleam of his store?
Some shiverer seeks abroad for aid
The sitting cereals on the granary floor,
Or his own hand, for the winnowing wind,
Or a half-grown furred sow, with the
Drooping and the rattle of the leaves,
Spurs the nest and the small grain towers,
And sometimes like a gleam that dot
And they laden head across a brook;
Or by a silver stream, with patient look,
Where a water-lily, the hour by hour,
Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While thro' the avenue that the soft dry day,
And the cool air, the soft dry day,
Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While thro' the avenue that the soft dry day,
And the cool air, the soft dry day,

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While thro' the avenue that the soft dry day,
And the cool air, the soft dry day,

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While thro' the avenue that the soft dry day,
And the cool air, the soft dry day,

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While thro' the avenue that the soft dry day,
And the cool air, the soft dry day,

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While thro' the avenue that the soft dry day,
And the cool air, the soft dry day,

Where are the songs of Spring? Ay, where are they?
Think not of them, thou hast thy music too,—
While thro' the avenue that the soft dry day,
