Re-Establishment of the Kingdom of Poland.

There are various indications, little in themselves, but amounting to something in the aggreinte, that the courts of France and England have estually under consideration the practicability of restablishing the kingdom of Poland as an independent power Such a stroke of policy, it is to be believed, is a favorite project of Napoleon III, who hopes thereby to cripple Russia's influence over the German powers, and as the influence of Rossis diminishes to build up that of France in its room.

A pamphlet which has just appeared in Paris, Question," and which is suspected of having been | all except temporary advertisements, when paid in advance inspired by governement suggestion, argues the speace with some ability. Paris correspondents gives long extracts from this pamphlet. The following may suffice as a opecimen. The author anks of what use is all this success in war? He asks if it has weakened the power of Russia, and brought down her pretentions. He boldly answers No! for as long as Poland remains in its present condition, the victories of the powers will be fruitless. He continues:

"The Russian fleet in the Black sea will be annihilated; that of the Baltic will patiently await its turn. All that is undeniable. But when all those great things shall be done what will take place afterwards? Do you believe, sire that the Car, that the Authorat of all the Rustre April 15, 1554-18
