General Miscellaneous Matters.

THE TWO GRAVES.

Mourner! thou for kindred dead,
Sleeping in their narrow bed,
Do thy sad tears start?
Oh! the grave o'er which I weep,
Keeping vigils long and deep,
Lies within my heart.

Buried there, 'mid sighs and tears,
Lie the hopes of other years,
Blossoms of an hour;
Memory sitteth by the tomb,
Mourning o'er the faded bloom
Of the wither'd flower.

O'er thy grave, the clouds at even
Hang, like banners flung from heaven
In the sunset light;
But the graves within my breast
Have no clouds in glory drest,
They are rais'd in night;

Neither moon nor twinkling star
Shineth, from its home afar,
On the lowly bed;
Only Memory watching, weeps
O'er the grave, where coldly sleeps
The Beautiful—my dead.

—Life Illustrated.

The Chief of Police in New York.

Many curious anecdotes are told of this gentleman, not a few of which are highly amusing. Fancy a short, thick-set man about five feet nine inches, and nearly as broad as he is long.—Dutch built, of powerful frame, neck rather short; broad round face, and a body which, if it were stretched out to the proper point of gentility, would double his length, and you have the Chief Police. Of such a man, you say, it were impossible to disguise himself so as to be talked to her many times without the Chief would come in, and she did not recognise him.

It is not so difficult to disguise one's self, after all; if the physiognomy and voice are altered. A tube under the tongue will alter the latter, and the former can be transformed by an imitation goater, moustache or whiskers—Mr. Matsell can do what very few men can do, either on or off the stage. He can give the brogue of an Irishman with all its richness, the broken English of a Dutchman, and the lengthened drawl and broad dialect of a Scotchman, so perfect that a native of either of those countries could not but be deceived. He can give the "top o' the morning" to Pat, "arrah; how are ye?" and to Sawney, "hoo are ye, mon? eh, mon. I'm glad to see ye;" and to Dutchy, "yaw, yaw," seems to come naturally. He is also an adept at imitating the Frenchman and Italian. If the Chief could not disguise himself, there would be little use for him in the Police Department of New York. There are men in every sphere of life whose study is how to shirk work and duty.

Did you ever see an old Dutchman, roughly clad, early on a summer's morning, just before the break of day, going lazily along in his milk cart, looking from side to side, as if he were not quite certain of the numbers and his customers? He pulls up suddenly, and alights just beside a policeman who is taking a comfortable nap on a door step. He goes up to him and gives him a shake.

Policeman—Who the d—l are you—you d—d Dutchman? What you want?

Milkman—Ah! I catch you asleep. I tell the Chief. Help mine cow off?

Policeman—No; go along and don't trouble me.

The milkman goes along, but the policeman finds out before night that he had been talking that morning to the Chief of Police. Sometimes, rather than face the music, the Policeman resigns, and nobody knows why.

Another illustration. It is a cold, bitter night, and a drizzly sleet gives evidence of an approaching snow storm. The pavements are all slippery, and the streets are rather slushy—It is an hour when they are generally deserted. A stranger is seen staggering through Broad street; he is very respectably dressed, but his tongue betokens his country; he stops and looks at a corner, but the darkness and sleet render it impossible to discover where he is. No lamp posts indicate the locality.

"Thunder an' ouns, New York is an infernal place. I wonder where the police are?"

On he goes, and at last he finds one

"Can you tell me where the South Ferry is sir?"

Policeman—Yes sir; follow your nose and you'll come to it."

"Och, but ye're funny"

On he goes till he meets with another, and the same ques'ion is asked and a civil answer is given, and he is directed how to go.

"Now sir, I'm a rale Irish gentleman. Arrah, now won't you come and take a glass of whiskey?"

"No sir, I don't need it, and you have got enough. Come along, and I will show you the South Ferry."

On the two go till they reach Pearl street, where a groggery stands. By hook or by crook, the Irishman could not pass till they had a drink. He was even so accommodating that he would go in and drink himself, and bring a glass to the policeman outside. The policeman was proof. The stranger persists in having a drink, and puts his hand in his pocket for the purpose of pulling money out, and while doing so, a number of five dollar gold pieces fall on the pavement. The Policeman curses, his stupidity, lifts the money up, puts it in his friend's pocket, takes a pin and fastens it so that it may not fall out again. The policeman, while gathering up the money, is blunt enough to tell him that there were more on the police who were more deserving of such money, than a fool like him: but at the same time refuses any thing to drink, or money for his trouble. The Irishman is conducted to the ferry, and here ends this matter.

Next day two policemen are sent for to go to the Chief's office, and they discover for the first time that they have been taking to the Chief the night previous. The one is reprimanded, and the other, it is needless to say, is duly promoted at the proper time.

An ingenious down Easter, who has invented a new kind of "Live-Letter Ink," which he has been selling as a safeguard against all actions for breach of promise of marriage, inasmuch as it entirely fades from the paper in two months after date, was recently most awfully done brown by a brother down Easter, who purchased a hundred boxes of the article and gave him his note at ninety days. At the expiration of the time, the ink inventor called for payment, but on unfolding the scrip, found nothing but a piece of blank paper. The note had been written with his own ink.

The Mormons have commenced, in New York, the publication of a paper, called "The Mormon," devoted to the spread of their principles. It defends polygamy as an ordinance from God, the Christian world having been laboring under a delusion on this subject for over eighteen hundred years. Mahommedanism is in danger of extinction on the Eastern Continent. It would be a little curious if it should spring up in full force on the Western Continent.

ALMOST A BULL.—An Irish girl in Oregon, the other day, complained to her mistress that the cow wouldn't eat her "dess." She "scalded the male, and she salted it—but divil a bit would the ould cow touch." On examination, it was found that Biddy's "male" was nothing but saw-dust. The cow was evidently not used to such "fine board."

A Yankee, describing an opponent, says: "I tell you what, Sir, that man don't amount to a sum in arithmetic; add him up and there's nothing to carry."

"Why don't you go to work and stop picking your nose?" "It's my nose, ain't it and it's Fourth of July, too. I'll pick thunder out of it, if I've a mind to."

THE OLD DRUG STORE.

To All Whom it may Concern.

WE wish to advise our friends and the public generally that we are making large additions to our former stock, which will render it one of the most complete and extensive up the country. Our business is divided into several departments, and includes, among others, the following, viz:

Medicines, Wines, Groceries Window Glass, Glassware, Dye Stuffs, Paints Oils, Brushes, Perfumery, Fancy and Miscellaneous Articles.

Our stock of Medicines is very extensive, embracing nearly every article of Chemical Mineral and Pharmaceutical, as used in the Old School, Eclectics, Botanics, and Homœopathists, together with a general assortment of Shaker Herbs and extracts. In the

Patent Medicine Department

Our list is too extensive to enumerate, embracing those preparations that are reliable and truly valuable, the reputation of which has become established by their extensive use, and their adaptation to the various diseases for which they are recommended has become a fixed fact.

Wines and Spirits

Are of the best, selected, purchased and kept for medical purposes only, and warranted to be as represented. In the

Grocery Department

We are not extensive, but what we have will always be found of the choicest and best. Prices moderate, and in these articles cannot be undersold with our selections. In the line of

Paints, Oils, Varnishes, &c.,

Our stock is very extensive, embracing not only a full and complete stock of materials used in House painting, but also every variety of article required in Chair and Coach painting; also, for Portraits, Landscape, Mezzotinto and the various Kinds of fancy Painting.

In WINDOW GLASS our stock is necessarily large, and as we are extensively engaged in the manufacture of SASH DOORS and BLINDS, consequently are obliged to keep on hand at all times from ten to one hundred boxes, making an assortment not less than fifty sizes, of various qualities and brands, French, English and American, among which are large and double thick, suitable for Show Windows, Cases, Pictures, Coaches, Cars, Boats, Lanterns, &c., &c.

As to BRUSHES, such as Paint, White Wash, Tanners', Scrubbing, Stove, Shoe, Cloth &c., we have every description to be desired in the various departments in which they are required.

And as to PERFUMERY, Soaps, Combs, Hair, Nail and Tooth Brushes, Fancy, Toilet, and miscellaneous articles we have sufficient to meet the reasonable wants of this entire community.

As to our ability to make such selections as will suit the tastes and views of our customers, both in quality and price, we leave for others to decide. Yet we think we know something in relation to the business, with a reasonable amount of cash, enables us to make our purchases in such a manner as to assure our friends that we will not be undersold by any other House in this city. A Rare Chance for Bargains.

THE subscribers, wishing to make room for a stock of Goods that can be bought for almost a song and a little cheaper "ready," from forced sales of Eastern Jobbers, owing to a tight time in the money market, have concluded to dispose of their large and magnificent stock of GROCERIES at wholesale, low prices for ready pay. The buying public will do well to call, as this is their last an opportunity, may never again to offer it.

Oh! My Corns—Confound the Cobblers.

The news! the news! have you heard it, the best of news,
That WILCOX & NORTON have a lot of new shoes?
They are at 10, as you know, H Brown's new Block,
Where the crowd is rushing to see their new stock

Their shelves are lined, from ceiling to floor,
With shoes, new and nice, for before,
Whose of all sizes and fevers I se,
Red, green and black, and a beautiful blue.

They have shoes, such as Pannas the fairy wears,
White satin and gilt, a few eegant pairs.
And to match, they've a large imagnationus S.ot,
That would scarce pinch the corns on a giant's foot

They've rubbers so polished they'll mirror the face
That stoops to admire the pedals they grace,
With buskins and gaiters of a finish so neat
That all who behold pronounce them complete

They've slippers so easy they'll mollify pain
Caused by tight fitting boots the bachelor's case,
They've stogas and brogans of Calcutta kip,
With seams that are warranted never to rip.

They have shoes at prices astounding; low,
And their customers, all, astonishment show,
As they learn that shoes can thus be bought
For a sum far less than they ever had thought.

They have—what have'nt they for a might of gold?
Then am so paltry it scarce can be told!
They have what will cover all soles ancient,
And make them go on rejoicing and glad,

And with them they've CORTER—the man you well know,
That he'll fit one exactly, how! instep and toe;
Tis said that he fits from morning till night,
But seldom a shoe that's too large or too tight.

The honey's no scarce in our neighbor's hive Live
That the poor old drones are hardly alive,
And ere frosty autumn its course has run,
They'll have flown to a clime that's nearer the sun.

But at No. 10 there is honey enough,
If you think I say it just for a puff,
Just stop for a moment—watch the bees in their hive;
See them going and coming—then say that they're.
