THE WORLD WOULD BE BETTER.

If men cared less for wealth and fame,
And less for battle-fields and glory;
If, writ in human hearts, a name
Seemed better than in song and story;
If men, instead of nursing pride,
Would learn to hate and abhor it;
If more relied
On love to guide,
The world would be the better for it.

If men dealt less in stocks and lands,
And more in bonds and deeds fraternal,
If love's work had more willing hands,
To look this world to the supernal;
If men stored up Love's oil and wine,
And on human hearts would pour it:
If "your" and "mine"
Would once combine,
The world would be the better for it

If more would act the play of Life,
And fewer spoil it in rehearsal:
If bigotry would sheathe his knife,
Till Good became more universal;
If Custom, 'gray with ages grown,
Had fewer blind men to adore it
If talent alone
In Truth alone,
The world would be the better for it

If men were wise in little things,
Affecting less in all their dealings,
If hearts had fewer rusted strings
To isolate their kindly feelings;
If men, when wrong beats down the right,
Would strike together and restore it,
If Right made Might
In every fight,
The world would be the better for it

Sugar Making this Spring.

The time for making maple sugar is now at hand. There are questions of economy; of scientific and unscientific arrangements for the manufacture, which, at the present time, it would do well to consider Most of us, or at least those who have reached middle age, remember the primitive mode pursued in elaborating the saccharine principle, which was something as follows.

In the midst of a dense forest of maples and other trees commingled, with the ground encumbered by underbrush and fallen, half decayed trunks, the trees were tapped, it may be by a ghastly wound inflicted with a AX—a rude spile was inserted and the drippings were received into troughs formed from the half section of a moderate sized tree The encumbered state of the ground rendering it impossible to penetrate the bush with a team, a neck-yoke and a pair of buckets were called into requisition for the purpose of collecting the sap as it exudes from the tree. This was collected and brought once or twice a day to a central point, where a huge cauldron, and perhaps one or two five-pail kettles were swung upon a pole sustained by crotches, up against which were rolled on either side a green log of wood, and under and around the kettles was piled the fuel As the flames and current of heated air and smoke rolled up beside the boilers, a furious ebullition was kept up within, and, to prevent the sap from wasting over the side, a piece of fat pork was occassionally added. On the principle of Esty's ventilators, the upward current of smoke and flame opening further and further until it reached the top of the kettles, formed above them a partial vacuum, into which were whirled soot and ashes, scorched leaves and cinders, and then very gently dropped into the boiling fluid The wood used for fuel was generally green, or at least dead or fallen timber, cut and split each day as required. It need not be said that such a process was laborious, unscientific, uneconomical—that there was a vast waste of fuel, and an inferior production.

The process of sugar making is very simple, and consists merely in evaporating the water which holds the sugar in solution, and obtaining the latter in a state of comparative dryness. The chief requisites, therefore, consists in using fuel economically, in warding off all extraneous matter, and in presenting as large an evaporating surface to the air as possible. These requisites are obtained by using a shallow sheet iron pan set in an arch, in keeping the sap free from leaves and dirt, and in using dry and well prepared wood A difference of opinion exists as to the preference of a bit or gouge in tapping; but either will do if care be taken to wound the tree as little as possible. Sap troughs should never be used; the labor required to prepare them will pay for wooden buckets, which are infinitely to be prefered The latter can probably be obtained by the quantity at twelve and a half cents each, and, if properly cared for, will last a life time. Tin buckets are a superb article, but somewhat expensive A good tin bucket holding ten quarts, shaped like a flaring tin pail, and having the wire over which the tin is turned at the top bent into the form of a loop for suspending the bucket, costs, by the hundred, twenty-seven cents. It is a question for each man to decide for himself, whether he can pay that price for tin buckets, and if he can he may be sure that nothing can be better

The bush should be cleared of brush and logs, so as to be penetrable in all directions with a team A common wood sled carrying a couple of hogsheads, will serve for carrying the sap with facility, which should be strained to remove any leaves or other foreign matter A kettle, set in the arch beyond the pan, so as to partially heat the sap before passing it into the pan, will be advantageous. After the sap has been evaporated to the consistence of syrup, or thin molasses, it should be strained off thro' a thick woolen cloth, and suffered to stand several days, until it has deposited all its sediment; after which the clear syrup should be carefully poured off, leaving the sediment behind.

A little skill and experience will determine the precise point at which the final evaporation should be arrested, and the "sugaring off" completed The process of cleansing consists in mingling with the syrup, before it has become too much heated, any albuminous substance, such as blood, eggs, milk, &c. This coagulates by heat, mechanically closing the particles of matter floating in the fluid, and then rises to the surface, whence it is easily removed by the skimmer.—The sugar refineries make use of blood, which is collected in immense quantities at the metropolitan slaughter houses.

There are two objections to the farmer making use of this material; one is, that he is not killing animals at this season of the year, and blood is therefore difficult to obtain—and the other is, that, however efficient blood may be as a purifier, the idea of its use for such purposes is somewhat offensive to fastidious persons. As milk and eggs are perfectly satisfactory and alway attainable, their use is to be preferred. The sugar may be stirred off, put into tubs and drained, cast into cakes, or otherwise disposed finally as each individual chooses for himself. We hope our farmers will endeavor, during the present season, to manufacture at least a portion of their own sugar, and thus aid in relieving the pressure which at present exists upon the trade.

DEATH FROM JOY.—Not long since, Mr. John Burgess, of Norfolk, Eng., was expecting his son home from a sea voyage of between three and four years duration. He had been disappointed in meeting him two or three nights, and was again on his way down to the station to meet the train. It appears that the train had arrived, and the son, on his way up, met the father, but neither appeared to fully recognise each other. The son walked on, and the father overtook him, looked at him, and passed ahead of him, not even then identifying his son, untill the latter said, "Hold hard, father, don't be in a hurry," when he stopped and said, "Good God, is that you, John!" They walked on together, when the son went into a beer-shop, and wished the father to go forward and break the news of his arrival to his mother. Observing that he looked pale and excited, the son wished him to take some thing, but he did not, and proceeded to inform his wife of the son's arrival, intending to go back and return with him. The son, finding he did not come, feared that his mother had been upset, went home, and found his poor father a corpse on the floor. On returning, he had opened the door and exclaimed, "Good God, Maria, John!" and fell down dead before finishing the sentence. He was a most affectionate father, and, no doubt, the joy experienced on the return of his son

At the time the building was commenced, the County had no surplus funds, and in order to raise means to carry on the work, the Commissioners, (as authorized by Act of Assembly,) procured a loan to the County of $44,000, for which they issued County Bonds drawing 6 per cent. interest. Two thousand dollars of said Bonds were redeemed by the Treasurer, in the year 1855, and cancelled, consequently the county is still indebted for outstanding bonds, Jan. 1st, 1856, amounting to $42,000.

We, the undersigned, Commissioners of Erie County, do certify that the foregoing statement is a full exhibit of the receipts and expenditures of said county for the year 1855.

NEW YORK HORTICULTURAL REVIEW,
A Journal of Suburban Art.
Superbly and Profusely Illustrated.
Devoted to the Advancement of the Rural Interests in America.

THIS is one of the largest and most elaborate Works of the kind in the world.

Rural Architecture forms one of the principal features. Each number contains from two to four engravings of model cottages, from designs by eminent and skilful architects. Space is also assigned to the tasteful art of Landscape gardening; especial plans of gardens in every style, and adapted to the peculiarities of different orders of architecture, beautify the work.

Engravings of new fruits, new flowers, new varieties, &c., are introduced and described as soon their relative qualities can be determined, forming the most complete and elegant Manual of Rural Husbandry ever attempted.

An experienced corps of practical writers, seven in number, are engaged in its columns.

It contains seventy-two pages, and is printed on the finest paper-tinted paper, manufactured expressly.

Terms.—$2 per annum, payable invariably in advance. Fifty cents commission on each subscriber allowed to those who act as agents. $2,000 will be distributed at the end of the year among those who send to the twenty largest lists of subscribers Three premiums will be paid in cash. The first premium will be $1,000.

The following are selected from hundreds of similar notices, voluntarily contributed by contemporaneous publications:—

The HORTICULTURAL REVIEW deserves the most liberal patronage. It is ably conducted, practical, but is written in a style that equals the best efforts of the late A. J. Downing.—Schoharie.

The most elegant and useful book of the kind that has ever come under our observation.—Reporter.

Mr. Vaughan, the editor of the HORTICULTURAL REVIEW, is a practical pomologist, and one of the finest scholars our country boasts of. He possesses the glowing descriptive powers of Chateaubriand, the elegant gossip of Walpole, combined with a thorough knowledge of horticulture.—Democrat.

Farmers, buy it for your sons—buy it for your daughters. It is a rich intellectual treat—a rare combination of the beautiful and practical knowledge.—Commercial Advertiser.

We had thought that in Downing's death, the eloquent advocate of rural refinement had become only a cherished remembrance; but Mr. Vaughan we discover an equally rich mine of refined taste. He possesses the influence of the spirit that is gone.—Montreal Tribune.

Advertisers will find this an unexpressed medium of publicity, as the HORTICULTURAL REVIEW circulates extensively in every state in the Union. Advertisements inserted at the rate of $10 per page.

WOOD ENGRAVING.

Those requiring Wood Engraving, can have their orders executed in an unrivalled manner. Special attention is given to views of ANIMALS; an experienced English Draughtsman is engaged for this express purpose. Persons living at a distance can forward a photograph of the subject (by mail) they wish engraved, which will be a sufficient guide to obtain a perfect fac-simile. Stock Breeders will be dealt with on very liberal terms.

Our Exchanges list is already very large. A further extension is not desired, unless publishers are willing to give the above advertisement several insertions in their respectable paper

Agricultural Books can be furnished on every useful subject, from both English and American publishers, by enclosing to our address the price of the book required.

Specimen copies will be forwarded on the receipt of 18 cts in postage stamps.

"Love rules the court, the camp, the grove,
For Love is Heaven, and Heaven is Love"
So sang the Bard yet thousands pine
For Love—of life the light divine.
Who, did they know some gentle charm,
The bearer of those they loves to warm
Might live, might die, in bliss supreme.
Possessing all of which they dream
The Road to Wealth would you know
Delay not, but to ROUNDOUT go
Time flies, and from his gloomy wing
A shadow falls on living things.
Then seize the moments as they pass,
Ere fall the last sands through the glass

While all the future is unknown
