

THE ERIE OBSERVER

Published every Saturday by B. F. Sloan and M. M. Moore, Office corner of State and Fifth streets.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING: One square of 10 lines for one week, $1.00; for two weeks, $1.75; for one month, $3.00; for three months, $8.00; for six months, $15.00; for one year, $28.00.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

- W. H. BROWN, Grocer, 100 North Water Street. J. H. BROWN, Grocer, 100 North Water Street. J. H. BROWN, Grocer, 100 North Water Street.

Select Poetry

From the Richmond Express

A CALL TO SPRING. Come, come! thou hast tarried long! Come with the light of day and song!

Choice Miscellany

From the Richmond Herald

THE TWO COLLEGE FRIENDS.

CHAPTER I

In the year seventeen hundred and seventy-three, three young men took possession of the only habitable room of the old tumble-down rectory...

am going to be a doctor, it's perhaps for the sake of fortune. "And that justifies you in putting it to death!"

Winnington, as usual yielded to the superiority of his friend, and was a more affectionate in his manner to him than ever.

"I have done it," he said, when he got home again, late at night. "I know them both. The father is a delightful old man."

"What a dull occupation yours is!" said Winnington one night, "compared to mine. You go thumping old stones and gathering up lumps of clay."

But I can't venture to look forward to that for many years. I have only a hundred a year. She has nothing. Arthur sighed as he spoke.

"I think you should have made acquaintance with the magician, or even got possession of the ring, before you asked her hand," said Winnington.

"I have done it," he said, when he got home again, late at night. "I know them both. The father is a delightful old man."

"What a dull occupation yours is!" said Winnington one night, "compared to mine. You go thumping old stones and gathering up lumps of clay."

Winnington took no thought of the matter, but loved Ellen Warleigh with no consideration of whether she was rich or poor.

"I have done it," he said, when he got home again, late at night. "I know them both. The father is a delightful old man."

"I have done it," he said, when he got home again, late at night. "I know them both. The father is a delightful old man."

"What a dull occupation yours is!" said Winnington one night, "compared to mine. You go thumping old stones and gathering up lumps of clay."

"Ten danger's past," said Arthur, "both for him and me. I would have killed him if he had come near. Back, back," he continued, while he flung up the hole he had made, carefully shovelling in the soil.

"I have done it," he said, when he got home again, late at night. "I know them both. The father is a delightful old man."

"I have done it," he said, when he got home again, late at night. "I know them both. The father is a delightful old man."

"What a dull occupation yours is!" said Winnington one night, "compared to mine. You go thumping old stones and gathering up lumps of clay."

REMARKS OF HON. WILLIAM BIGLER

Delivered in the United States Senate, March 12, 1856.

DR. KANE'S ARCTIC EXPEDITION. Mr. BIGLER. Mr. President, I propose resolutions of the Senate in relation to the expedition to the Arctic regions, which took place in 1845.