The Mob of Friday Night.

Elsewhere we have given from the columns of the Ga sette, the American and the Constitution, their respective versions of the dugraceful affair of Friday night. We have done this in order that our readers can have a full view, from three different stand points, of one of the most dastardly and uncalled for exhibitions of mob violence and outlaw vandalism perpetrated in any community. There are the pictures, let them all be read, and then let us hear so more in this community about " border ruffians," "Missouri invaders," or any of the clap-trap phrases with which the Genetic and American have been tickling the sentiments of these who, too cowardly to do it themselves ears of their readers of late. In denouncing this mob, we like the monkey, use the ignorant and the vicious to pull are but echoing the sentiments expressed heretofore, times without number. The Philadelphia riots, the Louisville massagre, the Cincinnati and New Orleans destruction of ballot-boxes, all met our condemnation : and shall we fail onit us on Monday (remor has it thirty. we hear) for choose now, when mob violence is at our own doors---when men's private property is sacrificed to appease the mad fury of the rabble-when the sacred precincts of the homes of citi- press, after his had been thrown into the street. Fifteen sens are invaded, and their wives and children compelled others, however, immediately stepped in and filled their to seek shelter in flight-shall we now, we say, hold our tongues, and tacitly acquiesce. Shall we denounce crime afar off, but when it stalks at our own door, and finds victims in our own neighborhood, remain dumb, for fear our own property will share a like fate' We have had as much whipped into subjection by the cry, "stop my paper," and reason as any man in Erie to rejoice at the destruction of we should like to hear whather any body else ever did. the Constitution office, if we would allow passion and not | Will they tell us? princip'e to govern us. In times past, as is well known, that paper made most vituperative and slanderous assaults upon us -assaults, let us add, without provocation and without excuse. Since then it has pursued the same course toward many of our citizens; men whom we daily associated with, and who, if we did not always agree with, we still respected. It is not sympathy therefore with the paper, or the proprietor, that actuates us in condemning horrence of that spirit of lawlessness which if not checked renders private property useless, and life and liberty worth less. That there ever was excuse for a mob of this kind uner our system of Government, we deny. If the press misuse its privilege and degenerates from a free to a corrupt and licentious instrument of slander, the law affords to the slandered the proper redress; and as long as we profees to be law abiding citizens, and are governed by in its columns, and whose personal existence we doubt not was unknown to the proprietor. If we adopt the code which appears to be so much in vogue of taking the law into one's own hands, in God's name let us carry it out consistently, and let the person aggrieved seek satisfaction, the Legislature restoring the franchise of the Erie himself, and not allow half grown boys, candidates for the

Penitontiary, and other rabble of that ilk, to take up our quarrels, and in redressing our grievances disgrace the fair fame of our homes

This much we have deemed due to the subject in a general way, and now the inquiry arises, why was not the mob suppressed? We have a Sheriff whose duty it is to preserve the public peace, and maintain law and order .-

Every body else does this, so far as we can see, and we do not know why we have not the same right. Lawyers give their services, for a consideration, to the thief, the burgiar, and even the murderer, still no one imagines for moment that the fact of selling that service is proof that Lawyers are participants in the guilt of elients charged with then, burglary or murder. The Observer is going to live, and breathe, and remain one of the "institutions" o the city for some time yet. And while it may not be al ways able to direct the whirl wind, we trust by the help of past experience and untiring industry, never to be com-pelled to endorse the outrages of such a mob as that of Friday night, either by refusing to extend that courtesy which a common jumanity dictates, or echo the infamous their own chestnuts out of the fire.

It is hard for one who is not a Democrat to understand the perfect toleration of opinion which exists in the Democrafic ranks, and hence we are not at all surprised at the tenor of the above arcle from the Gazette. Now, when whiggery temporarily obtained power, it made the recipi-
