Such a government, when exercisfor the support of a government which is nothing but a curse to them.

In social life the people have peculiar ideas and customs. In the upper classes the females seem to have but little to do with life except to whip the negro now and then,—and to dress and ride in the volante. No lady ever walks out here. If she wishes to go 40 rods to make a call or a visit, she takes the volante. Hence ladies are never seen in the streets; but only at home, or a few of them at mass on Sunday morning, and on the "Paseo Isabella" and the "Paseo de Tacon," in their Volantes. Unmarried ladies and gentlemen never walk or ride together, or sit in a room alone. The etiquette of society here renders it disreputable. The unmarried lady who should be seen even riding in one of the public pascos with a gentleman, would be at once east out of the pale of fashionable life.
