and most picturesque regions of the Old Dominion, where the head waters of the Rappahannock wash the base of the Blue Ridge.

The precise spot—Crossland—is a sablime and beantiful scene, where two forest-crossned ranges of mountains cross each other at oblique angles.

At the intersecting point of these ridges nestles a little hamlet, named, from its elevated position, Altamont. At the period at which our story opens, the four estates, in the four angles of the irregular mountain eross, were owned as follows:

The eastern farm, called Piedmont, was the life month.

perty of Madame Auderly, a Virginian lady of the old The western and most valuable estate was the inheritance of Honora Paule, an orphan beires, grand-daughter and ward of Madama Anderly.

The northern and smallest one, called, from being the deepest vale of the four, Hawe's Hole, was the property of old Hugh Hawe, a widower of gloomy temper, parsimonious habits, and almost fabulous

The southern farm-named, from the extravegant eost of the elegant mannion-house, elaborate out-buildings, and highly ornamented grounds, which had absorbed the seeses of the late owner, "Parquier's Fally"—was the heavily mortgaged patrimony of Godfrey Farquier Dulanie, the grantoso of Hugh Hawe, and now a young aspirant for legal honors at the University ty of Virginia.

But little benefit to the heir was to be boped from the inheritance of his father's parthened property. In the first place, old Hugh Hawe had bought up in his own name all the claims against the cetate of Feronier's Folly-doubtiess to prevent a foreclosure, and to save the property for his grandson.

But, auhappily, Godfrey had mortally offended the despotic old man by declining an agricultural life, and persisting in the study of a profession—a coarse that had resulted in his own disinheritance. To make this punishment more bitter to bis grandon, the old man had taken into favor his nephew, Dr. Henry Hawe, whom he had established near himself at Furquier's Folly.

At this time, the disinherited heir, having finished a term at the University, had come down to spend a part of his vacation in his native place. It was upon the Saturday evening of his arrival that be found the little hotel, and, indeed, the whole village of Altamout, in a great state of excitement, from the fact that the celebrated heiress, Miss Honora Panic, had just stopped there, and passed through on her of her face, vied with each other in praise of her many charms, while these who had not, listened with eagerness, and looked forward to indemnifying themselves by seeing her at church the next morning.

The next day, Godfrey Dulapie attended church, where he saw and feli in love with the most beautiful and intellectual-looking girl he had ever beheld. From and intellectual-looking girl he had ever beheid. From the cheapness and simplicity of her attire, he supposed her to be some poor dependent of Madame Auderly's, in whose paw she sat. Godfrey was completely capti-vated, and he resolved at once to woo, and, if possible, win this lovely being for his wife, poor girl though she was. He was glad she was poor, because she could for that reason be more easily won. But on accompanying Mr. Willoughby, the clergyman, and his brother in-law. Ernest Heine, home after church, what was his asnent and dismay at being introduced to the supposed "poor girl," who he found to be no other than the celebrated Miss Honora Paule, the greatest heirem and belle, as well as the best and noblest girl, in the State of Virginia. She greeted him cordially, and in a few minutes the company were huslly engaged in conversa-tion. The topic of "capital punishment" having been started, Godfrey turned to Honors, and said: "I take an especial personal interest in having capi-tal punishment abolished.—Miss Paule, do you believe in astrology?" Honors started, fixed her eyes intently upon the ques tioner, and then withdrawing them answered—

"Sir, why you ask me if I believe in astorlogy?" "Because, Miss Paule , I was about to relate for your amusement a prediction that was made concerning mymif. by a professor of that black art." A prediction," exclaimed Mrs. Willoughby, draw-

"A prediction," exclaimed Mrs. Willoughby, drawing near, with eager interest.

"Yes, madam," replied Mr. Dulanie, amiling, "a prediction which, if I believed, would certainly dispose the to favor the abolishment of the death penalty. Three years since, while, I was sojoerning for a short time in the city of Richmond, on my way to the University. I chanced to hear of the Egyptain Dervis, Achbad, who was at that time creating quite a sensation in the city. His wonderful reputation was the theme of every tongue, "Idleness and curiosity combined to lead, me to his "Idlenes and curiosity combined to lead the to his rooms. He required a night to cast my horoscope.—

He demanded, and I gave him, the day and hour of my birth, and then I took leave, with the promise to return in the morning. The next day I went—"
"Well?" questioned Honora, earnestly.
"My horoscope was a HORROR-scope indeed! It predicted for me-a short and stormy life, and a sharp and unen destn. "Good Heaven! But—the details?"

"It prophesied four remarkable events, the first of which has already come to pass." "And that wes-?"

"The loss of my patrimonial estate!" "Singular coincidence!" interrupted Mr. Willoughby, as he arose and joined his wife and brother-in-law at the

She waited a few minutes for him to proceed, but find ing that he continued silent, she said-" Well, Mr. Dulania, go on! what was the third predicted event?" "Do you command me to inform you?" "No, sir; I beg you, of your courtesy, to do so." 'A dertone, "It was to be my marriage with the woman should worshin! "The fourth and last prediction was, that before my twenty-fifth birth-day I should perish on the scaffold."

A low cry broke from the lips of Honora as her hands flew up and covered beniface.

hands flew up and covered beriface. After a minute or two she dropped them, and fooking him steadily in the fass, said with quiet firmness—

"You doubtless wonder sit my enotion. Now hear me. On the antama following the summer in which that prediction was made to you, I was in Baltimora with my grandmother, and with Mrs. Willoughby, who was then Migs fleine. Curiosity took us to the rooms of the Egyptian, who was then practicing in that city. And after some such preparations as he had used in your case, he cast my horoscope and read my future. It was this, that turber say twentieth liftlinds, I should be a bride, but sever a wife, for that the fatal form of the spaffold arose between the auptial benediction and

CHAPTERIL THE STRUE CIRCLE

The next day, Honora informed her grandmother, Madame Auderly, of Godfrey's pressince in the neighborhood, and the old lade sent her gilly brother, Colonel Shannon, to fetter that in Haddmet. Godfrey accepted the invisation. The Majorativity, he found that Georial Steroe, the granger deal of Virginia, and his soo, had just taken up their grantes. It was now Miss Jessie's turn to test her fate. Being a young lady, she would not put the question in the usual form, but merely inquired what should be her fuevening.

"I declare, if here is not Mr. Hugh Hawe!" exclaimed the lively Lily, as the old miser sauntered deliberately to the table, and stood looking with indolent curiosity upon the game of the young people. "Come Mr. Hawe! I declare, you shall have your fortune

The eyes of Honora Paule followed him with the

The cheek of Henora Paule changed; yet striving with a feeling that she lelt to be unworthy, she smiled to the Hybil, who, in an effective voice, read—

Honora heard in silence, remembering the strange the astrologer, made long ago, endeavoring to con-vince herself that it was mere coincidence, and vainly trying to subdue the foreboding of her heart.

"Mr. Dulanie." said Rose, shuffling the tablets, and passing them to him.

He drew a card, and returned it to be perused.

The Sybli took it, and a thrill of superstitious ter ror shook ber frame as she read--"Disgrace and ill,

"I keel faint and sick at heart."

And leaving on the arm of her son, the unhappy wife tottered rather than valked from the place. The keen, frosty air partially restored her strength and Rachel proceeded with her children till she reached the thoroughfare leading through St. Margaret's church-yard towards the Almonry, when a faint moan from Mary, whom she still carried in her arms, arrest ed her steps. She pissed her hand under the thin fu-ded shawl which covered her, the child was cold as ice, and shivering, as it seized with an agus fil. "She is dying!" grouned the terror-stricken parentdying for the want of food!"

The heart of her boy could endure no more-it was breaking. The cup of misery and endurance had been filled to overflowing. His brain was on fire—tears could not quench it. "Tuke her home mother!" he cried—"take her home never fear but I will bring you food! Mary sha 't die! I'll beg-beg, he added; "anything to save her."

The appeal came too late. Her son, stung, maddened beyond endurance by the sufferings of those so dear to him, and broken from her feeble grasp, darted down the thoroughfare, and was sirendy beyond the reach o her voice.

Rachel clung to the radings of the churchyard for support, till a second moan, still fainter than the first, sent a pang through her material breast "She must not die in the street" inurmared Rachel.

"Home—home! If I have strength to reach it."

"On, Good, she stied gith a sudgen burgeof to guide, "protect my boy!" Shield Min from crimer gower him against vices and the hideous snares which in a thousand forms assail unfriended youth; or take him." she added solemnly, "take him in Thy mercy," It was a Christian's prayer wrong from a mother heart, uttered in faith, in azony, and tears; and angels hore it to the mercy-was on high.

Clasping her perishing whiled get closer to her aching bosom, the drunkard's wife hastened to her home.

As Richard Hoffman rushed along the street, scarce knowing whither he went, and only intent on the one idea of getting, by some monor, food for his famished mother and sixter, he was hailed by Jack Manders, an impish acquaintance who lived near Richard's home, and to whom he told the desperate state in which he had left those so dear to him. Jack listened with much interest, and at once proposed to Richard to belp him to pick the pocket of anyold gentleman, who was staring into a window on the opposite side of the street. Richard refused with horror, although Jack urged the necessity of at once getting something to save the life of his mother and little Mary. Jack then undertook the business alone, and just as he half relieved the old gen-tleman of his pocket-book, a policeman sprang from a doorway to arrest him; but Jack made good his escape, Not so Richard, who was at once seized by the policeman as an accomplice of the escaped pickpocket.

"I am no thief, sir," cried Richard breaking from the strong grusp that held him, and throwing himself at the feet of the old gentleman, who had just come to the spot, "though poverty and hunger tempted to me become one. My mother and sister are starving."
The future history and trials of this poor boy be given in the New York Ledger of January 16, which is for sale at all the bookstores and news offices.
