this Binto, bas made his mark in the Bouse. His speech in the Nontrolity Ladin, in rophy to Son. Quernan, is an ed on all hands to be the meast of the set and has established at case his claim, to be ranked amon the ablest mon of that body. We have read it with inf. nite satisfaction. His difense of the President and Cos Paulding is clear, legical and conclusive. Gen. Quitma had assumed, in his defense of filibusterism, (which, the by, we had the pleasure of listening to) that the law o nations does not prevent our sitisens from banding them solves together to javade the territories of othe with which we are at pence; and also that the Co of the United States does not grant to Congress any power chalover to pase a law to prevent our a nations. The speech of Mr. Montenmerv is a proto ant hath these prop mitions. He truly 'personks "It is a strange destrine for a statemen to advocate, that when we have seasinged a treaty of peace with anothe nation, that treaty is binding only on our Government, and not upon our people; that the treaty of peace amount saly to a compact which blads the powers of this Government, but not the powers of the people. He maintain that the true dectrine is, that when our Government is at wade the territories of that nation, nor one any sitison of this Government invade them. The trenty of peace is as bread or the nation; and embraces every individual in it and not only every citizen, but every resident of the coun. | indy, Victoria. The little girl bern on the Slat of Neventry is bound by that treaty of peace. Nobody has any more right to violate it then the notion itself After showing from Vatiel that these position

The friends of that continues had accumed in their descention of the net of Cost Paulding that at had been passed by Condress that anthorized his arrest beyond a marine lorge from our own shores, and hence the act of seising Walker in Mingranges, was an outrage for which ample remuneration should be made by our goy. which, missing him, struct the perch or front ornment. The reply of Mr. Montgomery to this assumpin R. Ogie, painter and glassier, living on tion was most seasturire. "The law of nations," said he, requires that we shall restrain our sitizens from committing aggressions against other States. The Constitution baset i law for that purpose. Concrete, in obedience to ate the boy's head. The escener's jury which int and enforce the isw of nations, named the act of 1818.elared in their verdict that the evidence ad. | One of the plainest rules of interpreting a statute, is to know the object of the law making power in enacting " marticular law. If we know the motives which prompted when they enacted the statute of 1818, was to carry out the law of nations; and yet, abcording to the argument of the other side, they did not do it. They did not do what they intended. He contended that such an interpretation was an unfair and an unnatural one. It would not be the interpretation given by the Congress which passed that low. They intended to guard against every infraction of the law of nations by our citizens; they intended to guard for the purpose of carrying war into countries with which re were at peace." The speaker then pro

What is the ma Is its application confined to within the marine league. Or does it extend from our shores to the place where conflict of war is taking place? I ask you whether such Expedition is not being ruiss are somally in sight of such other and ranged battle array, and even when they are actually engaged preventing them from "carrying on pulpose of preventing terms from terring on the shore? If we cannot prevent the expedition from being carried on whereyer was and in the answare of the act is too broad; and if Commodors Paulding parased the words of the act, the fault is in the law, and not in that poble American sailor. The next question that arises is this: Has spot where they thought was a "lead." staked of a daim Walker committed any offense against the law of nations? No man will stand on this floor and deny that he went with an armed force into s"country with which this coun-Walker com try was at peace; that he went into Nicarangan with a body of soldiers, with arms in their hands.
