Confession of Lamb, the Murderer

George H. Lamb was taken before Justice Herekenrath yesterday afternoon, for examination on the charge of having, on the 17th of December last, destroyed the life of his wife. Sarah S. Lamb, by drowning, in the Mississippi river. He plead guilty and waived an examina tion, on which he was fully committed to the county jail to answer at the Criminal Court .-Before being taken thither, however, he voluntarily made confession of his crime.

THE CONFESSION.

I was married to Sarah S. Lamb at the court house, in Quincy, Ill. in November, 1856, by a justice of the peace. I did not take my wife to Mendota but left her with her father in Hamilton I went in November to her father's house to remove her, for the purpose of going South to spend the wintigs. Myself and wife came to St. Louis, arriving on the 27th or 28th or 29th of November. We got here before daylight in the morning, and took breakfast and dinner at King's Hotel. We left King's Hotel and went to the Astor House, on Franklin avenue, kept by Har mon Norp. During the time I remained at the Astor House my wife was unwell! I had a physician Washington. Her sickness was caused by my giving her poison—strychnine, obtained on Broadway I think I gave it to her twice. My intention was to destroy ber life. I went for

I then halloed seventy seven miles by water He stopped at fer some one to come and take me of the sand various points on the route, and explored the bar. I halloed about one hour, and an old adjacent country, which is inhabited by wild countryman, a German, and another, came and Tartar tribes, Mantochous and Chinese. He took me off. It was getting dark when I threw found the people ready to trade and barter their my wife overboard. I designed drowning her products, consisting of wheat, rye, barley, Indian when we left the Astor House. My reason for corn, buckwheat, cattle, sheep, horses and camela, cousing her death was that I felt satisfied I could for cotton and wollen cloths, iron, tobacco, liquors, looking glasses, cheap clothing, sugar, rice, trinkets, &c., &.

The various tribes were at peace with each any of her relatives. I felt as though I could other, and, although he had numerous and in. not go back among my neighbors with her, be
