THE LIVING TEMPLE.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Not in the world of light alone,
Where God has built his blazing throne
Nor yet alone in earth below,
With belted seas that come and go
And endless isles of sunlit green,
Is all the Maker's glory seen—
Look in upon the mystic realm of man
Eternal wisdom at its work and plan!

The smooth, soft sea with purple lake in caves
Flows murmuring through its hidden caves
Where streams of brightening purple rich
Bathed with a warm and livelier blush
Where all their burden of decay
The ebbing current bears away,
And veil with mixture's shame the skies
From the wide [illegible]

[illegible]
But warmed with that [illegible]
Behold the [illegible]
Its living [illegible]
With [illegible]
And [illegible]
By [illegible]
Which [illegible]

See how [illegible]
[illegible]
Yet in those [illegible]
By any [illegible]

As [illegible]
Wakes the [illegible]
With [illegible]

As [illegible]
Of [illegible]
And flashes forth [illegible]
[illegible]
The lightning gleams of power [illegible]
Along [illegible]

Thinks [illegible]
When [illegible]

STORY OF A MAN OF BUSINESS.

I did not want to hear the messenger come to the basement door. Before the last word had died on his lips I was in the saddle, and putting the spurs to my horse, I dashed away. Only one thought was in my heart, and yet I could not keep, even in that mad gallop over the hills, drinking in, through my senses, my fill of beauty. White in the still lay the moonlight over the fields on either side. I could see my shadow stretch, Centaur like, upon the green sward. Not a breath of air was stirring—it was one of those rare nights such as sometimes the late fall gives us—pearls snatched from the neck lace of summer—Pure and white, and silent was the matchless hour, and yet I was riding on through its stillness toward the home where the woman lay dying who was to die for me.

Involuntarily I slackened my reins as I approached the town. This was my old habit, when I was half stunned at the gate to meet me, and I had learned to look upon her exceeding beauty, and brighten by a moment's delay the rapture of her welcome. It was all a delusion, I knew, but I almost thought as she [illegible]
