England, as follows: "I am afraid I shall never see you again, but still I live in hopes. We started from Salt Lake some time since to come back; but the hiermonic met us, and we were compelled to go back. On arriving at the Salt Lake, I was not a little surprised to see the men running after the women and asking if they were married; but I have not got married yet, and I do not intend to. Many of the men have eight or ten wives, and he sleeps with one two nights, and another two nights, and so on, and that is Mermonism; but this is not all, for Brigham Young has 60 women, and they had twelve sons in one year, and how many daughters I do net know What they preach about is—, thieving, and cutting anybody's threat, and if you ask anything about it, you are told it is none of your debusiness. I know one young woman of fifteen, who has had four husbands in five months, and that gives you an idea of Mormonism. Ann Jubb came along with us across the plains, and when she got to Salt Lake there were so many men after her that she got married, and she is the second wife, and they call her Ann Webb, but she is far from being comfortable, and would be glad to be back again. If I was in England, and any Mormon elder came to the house where I was, I would give him a pretty warm reception. Mormonism in England and Mormonism in Salt Lake, are as different as chalk and cheese."
