WHAT'S TRUMPS?

There are so many cards to play;
So many ways to chose,
In love and politics and war,
That forwarding our views
With ladies fair, with statesmen wise,
Or men of lesser bumps,
Before we lead our strongest suits,
'Tis well to know what's trumps.

Once, worshipping at beauty's shrine,
I knelt in bondage sweet,
And breathed my vows with eagerness,
And offered at her feet,
My soul, well stored with Cupid's wealth
A love cemented lump.
A king of diamonds won the trick,
My heart was not a trump

Raving to see my rival win
Upon a single rub,
As he had played the dice with me
I followed with a club
Spades within a station house,
Reflecting on my sin,
I found, as other men have found
Cards very seldom win

[illegible] experience,
I turned to deal with imaginings
I shuffled youthful follies off,
And turned up jack of spades
Yet still I find as dupe is scarce,
And smaller grow the bumps,
That though she spade's an honest card
It is not always trumps

But in this world of outside show
Where Mammon rules the three,
Excuse the little jaunts of life,
And smoothly pass alone
To find an antidote for care,
And stern misfortune's bumps,
One card is very sure to win—
Diamonds are always trumps

I Wish You was Dead.

"I wish you were dead!" They were thoughtless words, uttered in a thoughtless manner; but no sooner spoken than regretted. A bright eyed child of six summers, whose countenance was the emblem of innocence and beauty, had been pleading in a low, soft tone for the mother to remain at home. It was weary and sick, and longed to be cradled in the arms of her who had given it being. But the woman of fashion arrayed in her silken robes, and with jewels glittering on her arms and neck, and impatient to display the same, had only brushed it aside with "Such a torment! You plague me to death!" and those never to be forgotten words:

"I wish you was dead!"

The little eyes, which a moment before had been kindled with hope, drooped and fell. No cry was heard; but when again they raised, with a sad, despairing glance at the form of the departing mother, the pearly drops were glistening beneath the tender lashes, and trickling down the pallid cheeks. And while she who had pronounced those unintentional harsh words, and who already experienced the keenest reproaches for the course she had pursued, was being rapidly whirled away to a scene of unrivaled splendor, the little sufferer had allowed itself to be undressed and placed upon the lonely couch, where it lay down to fulfill its mother's unmeant wish—to die!

It was late, very late that night, when the giddy devotee of the folly and show of life returned to her princely home. As the carriage drove up to the door, she perceived lights passing to and fro before the window. With terrible forebodings, and without stopping to bid adieu to the friends who had been her companions of the evening, sprang out of the coach on to the walk, and hastily ascending the marble steps, flew by the servants she dared not question, and soon entered the room where lay what was, after all, her darling Eddie.

Her husband and the physician stood beside the bed. The former glanced reproachfully at her as, with frantic movement, she came up beside him and leaned over. But she saw him not. Her eyes were bent upon the little form stretched upon the little couch, which, in its unconscious delirium, moaned:

"No, no! ma, you don't mean that, do you? You don't want Eddie to die?"

"No, dear, dear Eddie," she could not desist saying, "I should be mad if you left me. Oh! in pity," she cried, turning to the man of science, "tell me he is not dangerous."

A gloomy shake of the head was the only reply. The fever had fastened upon the very vitals.

"Oh, heaven! have mercy," she groaned in terrible anguish, as to her conscience-stricken mind came back those fearful words she had uttered so lightly awhile before, and felt that they were about to be realized "I wish you weredead!"

"You don't want me to be laid in the cold, damp ground, and never to see you again, do you, ma?" continued the delirious child, after a slight pause, during which a portion of medcine, just administered, had been struggling to take effect—"and never look at the green grass or bright sunshine any more; you don't want to take them from me—do you, ma?"

"No! no! Oh, Eddie! dear Eddie!" almost shrieked the unhappy mother, "look up; do you not know me, Eddie?" she asked, in as calm and nothing a tone as she could assume.

For a moment the eyes, with their wild appealing glance, opened, and turned upon the parent, whose cruel words—so cruel to the loving child—now so tortured its disordered thoughts; then, without sign of recognition, closed again, murmuring—

"Oh, ma, I am so tired and sick. Don't go away, I want to lay down in your lap and rest." Then, again, that heart-rending appeal, "You do not want Eddie to die—do you, ma?"

"Oh, my child! my darling child! what shall I do!" cried the agonized mother; "my heart will break. Eddie, Eddie!" she said frantically.

Again those little orbs opened, and this time a smile played around the sweet lips. "Mother," was faintly murmured; the little hands tried to move; there was a slight struggle—a gasp then all was still. The spirit of little Eddie had passed away.

Over the scene that followed, we drop the veil. The sanctity of grief precludes description. Suffice it to say, that in long after years that mother never forgot that terrible lesson she had learned. She became a changed woman, and when tempted to resume the heartless course she had forsaken, to neglect her children, or repeat harsh expressions, her thoughts invariably wandered to the little form which slept beneath the yew tree's shade, and she was saved.

A PROMISING YOUTH.—The Baltimore Republican gives the following as a few of the exploits of a boy only fifteen years of age, the son of a respectable resident of that city: "Not long ago a young Newfoundland dog, a favorite of his father, was securely tied by this young Nero, who saturated the body with camphene oil, and set fire to the inflamable fluid, which had the effect of roasting poor Towser until life became extinct, after the endurance of the most intense agonizing suffering which the mind can conceive. The young demon being well pleased at the result of this experiment in cruelty, next endeavored to toast alive his little sister, a bright intelligent child about six years of age. Having playfully bound her upon the cooking stove in the kitchen, heated to an intense degree in order to prepare dinner for the family. The shrieks of the agonized little victim were fortunately heard by the mother, who rushed down and removed the poor child before she was fatally injured, Toleration of the young villian's crimes had now ceased to be a virtue, and the father was engaged in preparations to effect his removal to the House of Refuge, when the hopeful youth suddenly disappeared at night from his dwelling, and no tidings have been heard of him since."

A GOOD RETORT.—Hon. Alex. H. Stephens, of Georgia, was once running for Congress with an opponent of unusually large stature, and on the stump one day, the discussion became exceedingly warm. Whereupon, the large man said to Stephens, who is small and delicate:

"Why, sir, I could button your ears back and swallow you whole!"

To which rude remark, Stephens retorted:

"And if you did, you would then have more brains in your stomach than you ever had in your head!"

The laughter which followed effectually dissipated the ill-humor which was gaining ground.

IMPROVED SEWING MACHINES.

MISS FANNY E. RHODES, Dress Maker, corner of Fifth and Sassafras Streets, having been appointed Agent for the sale of these machines in Erie, invites the public to call and examine one in operation at her rooms before investing money in others.

These Machines operate in an entirely new principle—using no Shuttle, but two Needles and two Threads. They have been before the public for over five years, and have been universally decided to be the only Machine adapted to all kinds of FAMILY SEWING, working equally well on Cotton, Linen, Silk and Woolen goods, Hemming, Felling, Tucking and the like with unexampled rapidity and strength unequalled by any other Machine.

Among the undoubted advantages that they possess over all others are, 1st, Beauty and simplicity of construction; 2d, consequent freedom from derangement and consequently requires no repairs; 3d, Unequaled ease and rapidity of operation; 4th Noiseless motion; 5th Beauty and strength of stitch, it is not a Chain stitch, but a Lock stitch alike on both sides, every stitch being locked, and CANNOT BE UNRAVELED.

If sick with any CHRONIC diseases, be not DECEIVED, as time only tends to confirm and render more intricate and difficult.

Dr. JACKSON will not prescribe for those who are not willing to bring his patients. The files published will be made, Unless patients correct, without corresponding prospect of recovery.

Dr. JACKSON does not tear down the Constitution and use poisonous poisons in any cases.

Dr. JACKSON procures his medicines from the wilderness of the Far West, analyses and compounds them himself.

Dr. JACKSON wishes it distinctly understood that he regards CONSUMPTION AS CURABLE DISEASE and is willing that his claims to public confidence may be estimated by the success attending his treatment.

Dr. JACKSON, although paying special attention to Lung, Stomach, Heart and FEMALE DISEASES, also invites to consultation ALL CHRONIC diseases peculiar to the human system. Seeing many thousand cases every year, he is well prepared to give an opinion as to the curability of any case.

L. B. WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS,

AN entirely new article in the Truss line, differing radically from any and all others in the world, and it really the only instrument of the kind worthy of the name. A short trial of the Truss by those that have worn the old or ordinary kind, will fully prove the truth of this statement. They are very light and very small, and the Pad can be readily adapted to fit any person, and the pressure easily adjusted to suit the convenience or necessity of the wearer. Those who are so unfortunate as to require the aid of such an instrument will do themselves a favor by examining this article, a few of which are left with the authorized Agents in Erie.
