

A Lady's Opinion of a Lady's Man.

Mr. Stevens, in her excellent monthly Magazine, this "pious" against a class of men which is becoming by far too numerous in this metro...

"What a worth the same as with a woman doer in thinking out lady's men the choicest specimen of his sex. Whatever their ignorance may be, womanly intuition must tell them that the men who fly for great objects, and those spirits are so firmly knit that they are able to conquer the storm's depth and whose feelings resemble the powerful current of a mighty river, are never smitten by mere beauty of form or features...

"Soft and delicate though he be, he is as impervious to ridicule as a bud carrier, and as regardless of honest contempt as a city alderman. Were you to hand him this article, he would take it to some social party, and read it aloud in the most melodious voice as an homage to his own attractions."

"What have you got there?" asked the butcher. "The examination, it looks like money."

"I suppose," said the butcher, "it is one I dropped when making change, a little while ago."

"To which the funder replied: 'I think I ought to have one half, for had it not been for me, you would not have seen it again.'"

"The butcher, knowing it not to be his bill, thought he couldn't do less than to comply with the fellow's request; he therefore took a five dollar bill out of his pocket book and gave it to him taking the bill himself."

"Soon afterward the butcher was purchasing some goods in a store, and offered the bill in payment to the stockholder, who pronounced it counterfeit. The butcher was surprised, and not overwell pleased; but on considering, thought the best thing he could do was to store the top-dollar note away in a safe place and say nothing about the way in which he had overreached himself."

"AN ITEM FOR DRINKERS—We copy the following for the benefit of that class of drinkers who make a practice of imbibing to excess and 'lying around loose.' May they profit by the warning: 'At Cincinnati, the other night, a man named John White, while going home intoxicated, fell in the street, and rolling over into the mouth of a sewer, came near being eaten by rats. It seems that an officer Lewis was going his rounds, about twelve o'clock at night, he discovered a pair of legs sticking out from the well-hole of the sewer. He forthwith repaired to the spot, and failing to recover the owner of the legs, caught him by the heels and drew him out, when it appeared that one of his ears was eaten off by rats. The vermin had just commenced their repast, and doubtless would have finished him by morning.'"
