

The Dying Year.
There's a small on the west wind's breath,
As it whistles the long day;
From roof and shuttered eaves,
And a fall from the plentiful harvest waves
For the steady breeze.

A New Sect.
Coroond, N. Y., Nov. 28, 1858—New Englanders have lately been obliged to take the notice of a new sect, religious or political. No matter where its origin may be, sooner or later it discovered that some emigrant from the shores of the West had been interested in the movement. However true this may be in general, it is certain that our city has always been favored with a large share of new lights. In '48 Miller had an immense congregation of disciples; the late excitement of Second Adventism had its origin here, and now we have another new sect.

They believe in community of goods. Civil law they regard, and endeavor, as far as they are able, to separate the members from their families. Their laws are Bible laws. Human authority is weak, and consequently cannot be perfect. To avoid acknowledging the law of the land, they do not intend to buy any real estate, but in the spring they will hire farms, where all the brethren and sisters may live together in peace and harmony.

A FEAR OF NATURE—Mr. Vestal yesterday requested us to go to the Commercial Hotel to see a rare natural phenomenon. He has a girl who has four legs and feet, and two heads, four arms and the upper part of two bodies, perfectly formed with the exception that the heart of one of these bodies is in the right side instead of the left, but though in a double, she is not a double, and is yet in its usual and perfect arrangement in one. Her two heads are very intelligent, and sing together. In answering questions asked by us, both answer together and in the same words, or different questions are asked, each answer differently. In walking, the girl two or four legs, which she says she has, she is most content. In eating, she uses both mouths, though she is not a double, and she answers the part as if she were a single person, and is as intelligent as the most of us. This constitutes a brief summary of the fact of this "new sect" what will come of it remains to be seen. If we may find anything in the past advances of these same preachers as Second Adventists, we might safely say they would be heard of.

THE QUAKERS—It is noteworthy that three prominent Americans—Benjamin West, the great painter; Charles Brockden Brown, the noted novelist, and John G. Whittier, the gifted poet, should be of Quaker lineage. This fact is a remarkable one, inasmuch as the Society of Friends, both in principle and practice, maintains a rigorous fastidiousness with respect to the profession of the Quaker. It is not a double, and is yet in its usual and perfect arrangement in one. Her two heads are very intelligent, and sing together. In answering questions asked by us, both answer together and in the same words, or different questions are asked, each answer differently. In walking, the girl two or four legs, which she says she has, she is most content. In eating, she uses both mouths, though she is not a double, and she answers the part as if she were a single person, and is as intelligent as the most of us. This constitutes a brief summary of the fact of this "new sect" what will come of it remains to be seen. If we may find anything in the past advances of these same preachers as Second Adventists, we might safely say they would be heard of.

DULLING—Traveling in a stage-coach, Professor V—got into an argument with a fellow-traveler about dwelling, the necessity of which the Professor strenuously denied. The other steadily maintained that it was necessary, and made cases which could be decided only by a duel. "I deny that," said the Professor. "Foli" exclaimed the other, "it is quite clear. Why, what else can you do? Here are you and I talking together, and suppose we get into a warm argument, and I say to you, 'you'll hit me'—what do you do? You must fight me—there's no other remedy." "I deny it," replied the Professor, "with respect to the duel, I will not do it, but I will do it." "Why," he said, "if you say to me, 'you'll hit me,' I will fight you. If you prove it, I do it; if you don't prove it, I won't do it. And there is an end to the matter."

The following marriage notice appears in a Boston Wm. paper:
Married—In this city on the 10th, by Rev. B. Parsons, Mr. Moses Murray, of Pittsburgh, Penn., and Miss L. Stacey, of Ripon, Wis. "Mr. Moses Murray, of Pittsburgh, Penn., is a great six foot seven, black as Othello, of the age of seven, and Miss L. Stacey, of Ripon, Wis., a white girl of sixteen. Her parents reside there, and have nothing of the abnormal effect which is so late to save a child from her disgraceful connection, and the fierce indignation they poured upon the "Rev. B. Parsons" the next day, could not make the rash deed had done without success.

Some favoring follows in Newcomb, Del., recently started a society, which was reported to be a lodge of the Sons of Noah. One of the initiated, however, exposed the whole concern. He stated that after being initiated, he signed what was represented as the Constitution of the order, but which turned out to be nothing more than an order for a keg of beer, upon one of the town brewers. The club had been in being for several weeks, and since the "blow" they have fallen through.
