"Some hundreds of years ago," says Mr Wilson, "a few of the McLeods landed in Eigg from Skye, where, having greatly misconducted themselves, the Eiggites strapped them to their own boats, which they set adritt in the ocean They were, however, rescued by some clansmen; and soon after a strong body of the McLeods set sail from Skye, to revenge themselves on Eigg. The natives of the latter island, feeling they were not of anfficient force to offer resistance, went and hid themselves, (men, women, and children.) in this secret cave, which is narrow and of great subterranean length, with an exceedingly small ntrance. It opens from the broken face of a steep bank along the shore, and as the whole coast is cavernous, their particular retreat would have been sought for in vain by strangers So the Skyemen, finding the island suninhabited, presumed the natives had fied, and satisfied their revengeful feelings by ransacking and pillaging the empty houses. Probably the moveables were of no great value. They then took their departure, and left the island, when the sight of a solitary human being among the cliffs awakened their suspicion and induced them to return .-Unfortunately a slight sprinkling of snow had fallen, and the footsteps of an individual were traced to the mouth of the cave.
