

the people, in Wm. H. HARRISON—The lieutenant of Washington—The aid-de-camp of Anthony Wayne; and the tried and faithful officer of Thomas Jefferson. He, in the days of our darkest trial and of peril to the frontier settler, drove back the savage allies of the British tyrant, howling to their wilderness; and when the sagacity of Jefferson saw in him the safe recipient of almost unlimited power, and placed him to rule and guide the destinies of the western Territory. He told the world that he was honest and capable; for Jefferson knew full well that he who would lay down his life for his country, would never pollute his hands with the corruptions which sap the foundations of all free governments.

How different would be our government, if administered by such hands, from what it is now under the tyranny and corruptions of Van Burenism—a tyranny which has invaded the domestic circle—which has palsied the business and happiness of many and sent the grim figure of want, like a spectre, to scatter beggary and despair upon the hearth stone of the industrious mechanic. It has proved the desolation of our land—the destruction of credit—and its blighting influence has fell like a mildew upon our home manufactures.

It is time that the hand of the destroyer was stayed; and the people, the whole people, from the cold hills of Maine, to the burning sands of Florida,—and from the soil of New Jersey, sodden with the blood of her heroes, stain; to the rich prairies of the far distant west, to call on him who has thrice saved their frontiers from the desolating hand of a savage foe, to preside over the destinies of that nation which he has so faithfully served in the field, and the council chamber.

It is meet then, that we the people of old Huntingdon, should be among the first to join the general acclamation, and lest the damning stain of ingratitude should rest upon our skirts, for slighting the claims of that hero and statesman. Therefore we Resolve, That we hail with joy, the opportunity thus presented, of paying a debt of gratitude to Wm. H. Harrison, by giving to him, at the ballot boxes, a demonstration of the value we set upon his services, which have been often celebrated with bonfires and illuminations, and which were written in blood, upon the forces of Tecumseh, and the more ruthless and savage Britain, Procter, at the river Thames.

Resolved, That in Harrison, we have a soldier, to whose abilities and bravery in the field, the Journals of the legislature of our own state; the states of Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky, and the records of Congress, bear ample testimony; and a soldier, whose conduct wears no stain of cruelty, and whose success and bravery, are attested by the written testimony of the venerable Shelby of Kentucky; of Richard M. Johnson, of Simon Snyder, of James Maddison, and Thomas Jefferson.

Resolved, That in Harrison, we have a statesman, possessed of more than common sagacity, foresight, talent and honesty, as illustrated by his councils in Congress, and his wise and sound policy, while governor of the North Western Territories.

Resolved, That in Harrison, we have a democrat of the old school, whose love of the people and the welfare of the country made him offer his life willingly upon the altar, dedicated to the rights of man, a kind of democracy too little known and too little honored, in these our days; when democracy means attachment to party, regardless of principle or the wants of the people.

Resolved, That in Harrison, we have a politician in the true meaning of the term—one who is at all times ready and able to serve the people, for the good of the people and the country, in preference to the benefit of his party and himself; as exemplified in his conduct, when governor of the vast territory of Indiana—superintendent of Indian affairs, and when vested by Congress with the sole control of the public domain; and with these vast powers in his hands, Thomas Jefferson made him sole commissioner for treating with the North Western Indians, with power to draw any amount of money he might deem necessary; and again when ex-officio governor of Upper Louisiana; yet from all these offices, though clothed with unlimited power, he came unpolluted by the corruptions of party or the plunder of place.

Resolved, That in such a soldier, statesman, democrat, and politician, we see the only man to whom the people can appeal with safety to bring back our government to its days of patriot purity.

Resolved, That in John Tyler of Virginia, we see a true, faithful, and intelligent son of the "old Dominion," to whom can be confided with safety, the second office in our gift.

Resolved, That the National Convention deserves the thanks of every American freeman for its patriotic course, in selecting such men as guardians of a free people.

Resolved, That Henry Clay deserves a monument imperishable as time, for his disinterested and patriotic conduct relative to the nominations; and his fearless and irresistible strife against the plunderers of the people, and the violators of public confidence and faith.

Resolved, That in the avowal of Gen. W. H. Harrison, that under no circumstances to serve but one term. We see the safest guarantee that he will administer the government for the best interest of the whole people, instead of wielding his power and patronage, to secure, either his own or his successor's elevation to office.

Resolved, That the thanks of this meeting be presented to John Williamson Esq for his able, and efficient exertions [as our delegate to the National Convention] to secure the nomination of the hero, patriot, statesman, and sage—Harrison.

The following persons were appointed delegates to the National Convention to meet at Harrisburg 22d February.

- Robert Lowry } Rep. Delegates.
Jacob Crosswell Esq }
David Blair, Esq—Senatorial Del.
The following were appointed as a Central Committee viz:
David M. Murtrie jr. Jas Steel Esq, W. P. Orison Esq, Dr. Charles Corvill, Thos M. Caban, David Blair Esq, A. W. Benedict.

The People's Meeting.

In another column will be found the voice of old Huntingdon, upon the subject of the nominations. Never was there more emphatically a meeting of the people. It was not a meeting of party. The unbought, unbribed, and unpolluted freemen were there; and in a language not to be mistaken, tell the tale of wrong which has been enacted by their rulers, and their determination to awake from their sleep of danger, and come to the rescue of their country and its treasure. The honest tiller of the soil, the industrious mechanic, and the toiling laborer were there—in truth it was a meeting of the multitude—who assembled to proclaim their willingness to be first in the cause of that old Hero, who was first in the bloody strife for freedom and equal rights. It was a glorious assemblage, and every face beamed with enthusiasm and joy. The language of their resolves speaks for itself—it is the language of an insulted, abused, and oppressed people, who come to declare that their "foes shall oppress them no more."

Our country was first in the fight, and last in the field for OLD TIP, and she is sworn to tell the people of other sections, that the slang of the vile, the falsehoods of the corrupt and venal partisan, nor the malignity of the hired traducers, whose love of place and plunder cause them to heap their bitterness upon the head of him, whose life has been one of danger, suffering, and patriotism—will never make them desert him, who never deserted the stars and stripes, whether assailed by the wily savage, or the disciplined subject of England's King.

We ask every candid, truth-loving citizen, to examine carefully the doings of our citizens, and then ask himself if their is not the language of soberness and truth. The meeting was severally addressed by Isaac Fisher Esq., John Blanchard Esq. and John Williamson Esq., our delegate to the National Convention. The addresses were all characterized by patriotism and eloquence; and the speakers were greeted by the hearty plaudits of the assemblage.

The Loco Foco Meeting.

The faithful held a meeting on Wednesday night, the 15th inst.; nothing of any importance took place. The same course was pursued there as elsewhere.—Every epithet which refined blackguardism could invent, was poured out against that scoured and war-worn old Hero—Harrison. Let them go on; the more they abuse the man who has not only fought, but won the battles of the free, the closer will that people who enjoy the benefits which his valor and bravery won eling to him. Go on, we say! go on! call him "granny—petticoat general—superannuated old dard—miserable old imbecile!" His history is the history of the frontier war. His glory is ascribed upon the institutions of our country—and his bravery will be remembered so long as the waters of the Thames flows toward the ocean, and his deeds of valor are written with a pen of steel upon the heart of every American freeman, who loves his country more than he loves his party.

The citizens of this county were no little astounded to hear epithets of detraction and contempt come from no less a man than Joseph B. Anthony, and hurled at a patriot like Harrison. Judge Anthony may rest assured that he forgets the dignity of a man of honor, when he mingles in the filth of party's pool, and hopes to dim the brightness of Old Tip's name, by attempting to give character to it because it emanates from an ex-Congressman.

One word more. Huntingdon county is no place for him to endorse the character of David R. Porter. We know him; and if he is anxious to keep his own character un tarnished, let his associations be as limited and marked by as little intimacy as possible.

It was not a little laughable to see the effect of the declaration in favor of taxation, when made in the meeting. It sounded like an echo in the damp walls of a cavern. Where there was before some little show of excitement, all was hushed as the grave; and should have convinced the speaker, that the people are not anxious to pay any heavier taxes than at present.
