Horrid Murder in Baltimore.

An intense excitement prevailed in Baltimore on Friday the 29th ult., in the neighborhood of the Cathedral, in consequence of a young and respectable female having been brutally murdered in the street on the previous evening. On enquiry we learned that Miss Anna Maria Burke, aged about twenty eight years, daughter of Mr. William B. Burke, sexton of Emory Chapel, residing in the family of Randall H. Moale, Esq., whilst passing along Mulberry street, directly opposite the Cathedral, had been knocked down, and had died from the wounds she had received in the course of the night.

A jury was summoned over the body yesterday morning, by A. Greenfield, coroner, in the presence of his Honor the Mayor, who conducted the investigation. On examination of the body, in presence of the jury, a severe gash was visible behind the right ear fracturing the skull, and driving a portion of the bone into the brain, which is supposed to have been the first blow received.

Another gash, about three inches in length was visible on her right eyebrow, which may have been inflicted by falling on the pavement, as well as a cut on her upper lip. A severe blow had also been received on the right jaw, breaking the bone, and knocking out one of her teeth, which was evidently inflicted while she lay insensible on the pavement. After examining the body, the jury retired into another room, when a post mortem examination of the body took place, conducted by Drs. Perkins, Thomas Buckler, and Danovan. In the meantime the following persons were examined in an endeavor if possible, to ferret out the perpetrators of this atrocious murder.

Mrs. Ellen Fell, lives at Mrs. Evan Poulney's opposite the cathedral—the deceased stopped at Mrs. Poulney's about 8 o'clock and stated that she was going down to Mrs. Hahn's, on Lexington st., for her bonnet, and that on her return she would call for one of Mrs. Moale's children who had been spending the day there. In twenty minutes after, the servant man called her down stairs, and she found the deceased in the entry with her head dreadfully cut—she said she had been knocked down on her way back from Mrs. Hahn's, at the corner of the alley on Mulberry street, nearly in front of Mr. John P. Morris's door—she did not know who struck her, or whether he was black or white—heard a man following her from the corner of Charles street, and when she reached the corner of the alley he knocked her down without saying a word—that she lay insensible for some time, and when she came to, she crawled to Mrs. Poulney's door and rang the bell. Witness brought her a basin of water, and endeavored to bind up her wounds; whilst washing her mouth one of her jaw teeth feel out—finding she could not stop the bleeding she took her around, with the assistance of a servant man, to Mr. Moale's, and remained with her until she died, at 4 in the morning. Witness had known the deceased about a year, and has no idea who committed the act, nor does she know whether she had any enemies.

Mr. and Mrs. Moale stated to the jury that the deceased had lived with them about three years, and that she was loved and respected by all in the house, from themselves down to the servants in the kitchen. She was employed as a nurse and seamstress—that a young man by the name of Johnson had paid his addresses to her about a year ago, but not recently—supposed he ceased his attentions on account of the circumstance of his having but one hand and being unable to support a family.

Mr. George Kraft, a brother-in-law of the deceased, did not know that any one had been paying attention to her but Mr. Johnston—never heard her say why he had ceased visiting her—did not think she had any enemies.

Mr. Wesley Burke, brother of the deceased, has no idea who could have committed the act—his sister had no enemies to his knowledge—had not seen her since last Tuesday week.

Mr. Johnson, the person alluded to as having paid attention to her was next called to testify—He stated that he had ceased visiting her from the conviction that his circumstances would not admit of marriage—he had still respected her and that they were on good terms up to the time of her death. Whenever they met he always stopped and spoke to her. There was no rival in the matter, and he had not heard of any addressing her since.

The jury being under the impression that the deceased had been mistaken by the assassin for some one else, and from the fact of her having a few moments before came from Mr. Poulney's house, summoned Miss Lara Baconhart, a young girl living in Mr. P's family. She stated that she had been living in the family nearly a year, having previously come from the country. She did not know of any one that harbored ill-will—had never seen the deceased but once or twice.

The doctors having closed their post mortem examination now reported to the jury that she had died from a piece of her skull being driven into the brain, caused by a blow on the back of the head.—The jury therefore returned a verdict in accordance with the facts—that she had come to her death by blows inflicted by some person unknown to the deceased but once or twice.

His Honor the Mayor has promptly offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the murderer, and we hope that nothing will be left undone that can lead to the detection and punishment of so great an outrage.

At ten o'clock last night no clue had been discovered that could attach suspicion to any one as the perpetrator of the horrid deed, although the police had been during the day on a sharp lookout. A gentleman residing in the neighborhood of the Cathedral informs us that on Tuesday night last he heard a loud scream, and not fifty yards from the spot where the murder was committed, found a respectable looking woman lying in great agony from a blow she had received on the head, by some person unknown. She was conveyed home by some persons who happened to be passing that knew her, since which she has not been heard from. A negro woman was also knocked down at the corner of College alley and Mulberry street on Friday night last, and is still lying ill from the effects of the blow. She was also robbed of some bundles of shopping she had with her.
