Whig Principles.

- "The principal objects which, I suppose, engage the common desire and the common exertions of the Whig party, to bring about, in the Government of the United States are:
1. A SOUND NATIONAL CURRENCY, regulated by the will and authority of the nation.
2. AN ADEQUATE REVENUE, with fair protection to AMERICAN INDUSTRY.
3. JUST RESTRAINTS OF THE EXECUTIVE POWER, embracing farther restrictions on the exercise of the veto.
4. A faithful administration of the PUBLIC DOMAIN, with an equitable DISTRIBUTION of the proceeds of sales of it among all the states.
5. AN HONEST AND ECONOMICAL ADMINISTRATION OF THE GOVERNMENT, leaving public officers perfect freedom of thought and of the right of suffrage, but with suitable restraints against improper interference in elections.
6. An amendment of the Constitution, limiting the incumbent of the Presidential office to a SINGLE TERM.
These objects attained. I think that we should cease to be afflicted with had administration of the Government."—Henry Clay.

Balloon Ascension.

We are indebted to the "Hollidaysburg Register" for the following interesting account of the fearful aerial voyage of Mr Wise, on the 4th inst.

The ascension of Mr. Wise in his new and beautiful balloon "Vesperus" took place on Saturday (the 4th inst.) according to the notice given. The day was entirely too stormy for an undertaking of the kind, and in the opinion of every reasonable man would have fully justified Mr. Wise in postponing the adventure; but trusting in the excellence of his vessel and his skill as an aeronaut, he determined to make good his appointment and to satisfy every individual of his numerous audience. He accordingly, after a most laborious and oft time discouraging effort, succeeded in sufficiently inflating his Balloon, and getting ready for the voyage, and at the hour appointed cut loose.

The ascent, although evidently hazardous, from the rupture of the net-work by which he was attached to the balloon, and from the unsteady and squally state of the atmosphere, was sublime beyond description. When the cord was cut he rose slowly from the arena, barely clearing the top of the enclosure, and taking a northern direction he swept across the town just escaping the house-tops; but discharging a couple of sacks of ballast he soon mounted high in the aerial regions to mingle with, as we supposed, the less angry elements above. But in this we were mistaken, for long before the "Vesperus" was out of sight, she was observed to be rocking strangely, as if the elements were no more friendly with her in her elevated position than when bound to the earth. The account of Mr. Wise, subjoined, gives a full history of this part of his adventure.

The ascent of a Balloon is a spectacle that to be realized must be witnessed.—No description can convey a just idea of its sublimity and beauty, as like some creature of life, it smoothly and silently, and steadily mounts upwards, with its golden sides glittering in the rays of the sun, and its tiny basket and well arranged cordage swinging gracefully beneath.—And then as the intrepid aeronaut waves his hat at a fearful altitude and sends down a faint response to the loud huzzas below, and every breast heaves deeply with the conflicting emotions of admiration, fear, sympathy, and a desire for like adventure, a thrill runs through the soul that no description however true and vivid can produce.

We need only add here, as the evidence will be given again, that Mr. Wise's conduct on the occasion was highly satisfactory to all concerned, and must greatly increase his reputation as an aeronaut; for we venture to say no other individual ever attempted an ascension under like unfavorable circumstances.

At about 8 o'clock in the evening, we heard of his return, and repairing to the U. S. Hotel, we found Mr. Wise somewhat disheartened about the loss of his balloon, and looking rather worse for the trip—his outer man having suffered considerably from his adventure among the branches of the tree on which he lodged. But meeting with a most hearty welcome from his friends, who on the spot manifested their sympathy for him by contributing liberally towards procuring him a new balloon, and by the generous conduct of the committee who had engaged him, he soon felt relieved; and now expresses his determination to cross the Alleghenies as soon as arrangements can be made.

Any information of his balloon, will of course, be promptly forwarded to him at Lancaster city.

Mr. Editor:—For the information of my many friends who were present at my 48th Atmospheric Voyage, made from the town of Hollidaysburg, on Saturday the 4th inst., I shall furnish you, for publication, all the particulars connected with the adventure.

The process of inflation was commenced at 11 o'clock, under very disparaging circumstances, as the elements were combining from all points of the compass to a general and boisterous storm. Nothing, in short, but the most indefatigable energy and perseverance on the part of Mr. Downy and Mr. David Woods, who had taken the most important charge under their control, could have enabled me to make an ascension under such a war of the storms. During the early part of the Inflation the re-action of the gas from the Balloon blew off the gasometer, which was soon repaired and replaced by my energetic friend Mr. Hinkle, and the Inflation was again resumed; but such was the violence of the frantic gambling of the "Vesperus," that it continued tossing to and fro my two friends who held it by the neck, that I began to despair of their ability to endure the rough usage they were laboring under all the time. After getting the assurance of those gentlemen that they would hang on to "the last ribbon" I retained my confidence in accomplishing the ascension, until I received the heart-sickenning information from some friends that the net-work was fast giving way about the top of the Balloon. I now gave up all hopes of getting off, and even greatly feared that the "Vesperus" would break through her trammels and encase; but Providence sent a gleam of sunshine, with a short abatement of the storms, of about 25 minutes, during which time we worked in a fresh supply of gas, sufficient for a long voyage. At precisely 3 minutes past 2 o'clock I mounted the car, and having ballasted the vessel it was restrained for a few minutes by a rope. But I felt that every surge of the Balloon was increasing the rupture in the net-work, which by this time was so large that a bulb as large as a hog's head was protruding through it. Knowing then that time was precious, I cut the rope and gave my host of friends below a parting salute, which was heartily responded to by the loud hurras of the thousand voices.

I now began to congratulate myself upon the victory I had gained over such formidable obstacles below, and felt composed that the net-work would stand it safely while the Balloon was free in the air.

The Balloon took a northerly direction, and was ascending rapidly until I reached an altitude of about 4000 feet, where it encountered a violent gale from the west, swinging it to and fro, and cracking the net-work at every surge. My heart at once began to sicken at the idea of falling away from the Balloon at that height, with nothing to protect me but the car and net-work; and the sensations and scene were rendered still more gloomy by the lowering appearance of the heavens in every direction, as around and beneath, the clouds appeared to be discharging torrents of rain and wind. I could also see the valleys west of the Allegheny mountain, where the sun was shedding down its beams of light and life.

At this crisis an expedient flashed across my mind. The valve rope would at least bear a hundred pounds, and the top of the Balloon being equally strong, I threw the greatest part of the weight of my body upon it. This necessarily opened the valve to its full extent, and must soon bring the machine to the ground. But the velocity of the wind, (being at the rate of about 50 miles per hour,) carried me 16 miles before I reached terra firma. I threw out my Anchor, which grappled in a fence and capsized it, and after bounding over the field it caught again in the fence and broke the rail. This concussion was so violent, and I finding myself driving into a rugged piece of timber land, I made an attempt to jump overboard into a ploughed field; but the Balloon rose with a violent surge and I was caught in a hitch of the ropes by one leg; fortunately I grasped the drag rope in an inverted position, thinking I would hang on to that, if my leg should be released.

Having lost considerable ballast in the concussion, the Balloon in a few moments dashed me into the top of a high tree in a piece of woodland; my leg still fast in the rigging of the car. Here I took a hitch to a limb of a tree, and even succeeded in tying a firm knot. I now made a desperate effort to release my foot from the car which was tossing about in the tree top, and the squalls against the Balloon would draw the tree over, making me fearful that the top would be broken off. By a violent kick I succeeded in releasing my foot, with the loss of my boot, from the car.

A single rope still held it fast to the tree, and after I got a foot hold on the tree I secured the valve cord in my hand; the squalls, however, became stronger, until it broke the rope by which I had lashed it to the tree top, with a terrible crash, and jerked the valve rope through my left hand, burning the skin to a crisp. The Balloon in a few moments dashed out of sight, the car keeping it in tolerable trim.

I discovered in viewing the machinery that I had taken unnecessary alarm in the breaking of the net-work, as it plainly proved itself sufficiently strong to have borne its load to any desired distance.—My regret was enhanced by the favorable opportunity that was before me of reaching Philadelphia by early candle light. After soliloquizing in the tree top upon the day's adventure for a while, I began to clamber down its trunk, leaving the end of the drag rope dangling in its top, ready for a port of entry to touch at in my contemplated trip from Pittsburg across the mountains to the eastern cities, as soon as I can rig up a new machine.

The car of the "Vesperus" had in it 6 copies of the Hollidaysburg "Standard," printed on the day of the ascension (4th of May, 1844); also a basket of provisions. Should the Balloon be found by any person he shall be handsomely rewarded for returning it, or giving me notice of its whereabouts, by addressing me in Lancaster City, Pennsylvania. The committee of arrangement whose untiring energy was devoted to my assistance the whole day, and who gave me such a cheering and flattering reception on my return, with their hearts and hands, have my sincere and warmest thanks for their social kindness, and noble generosity, in tendering me much more than the whole receipts of the day, before they even knew of my loss. Also those gentlemen from Huntingdon, Mr. Woods and Mr. Wallace, for their disinterested generosity in connection with several gentlemen, who acted in a double capacity of relieving me in my loss of the "Vesperus," which shall soon be replaced by their aid. My thanks are also due to Mr. Joseph Jones at Locks 14 and 15, for getting my hat from a tree.

Very respectfully your ob't serv't,
JNO. WISE.

night, May 4, 1844.

Who has lost a Balloon?

On the evening of the 4th inst., a balloon alighted on the premises of the Rev. John P. Van Valkenburg, of Lexington, in this county. The car which was attached to the balloon contained a lady's basket, in which was a quantity of cake, a small bottle, a tin cup, and several papers printed at Hollidaysburg, Pa., dated May 4, 1844. Attached to the basket was a paper upon which was written "John Wise, Philadelphia." The balloon was of a size requiring about six hundred yards of silk.

The above is from the Catskill Recorder of the 9th, and Catskill is the capital of Greene county, in the south-eastern part of the state of New York.

For the Journal.

A large meeting of the citizens of Huntingdon and its vicinity, friendly to the due observance of the Sabbath was held, in the Methodist Episcopal Church, on Wednesday, the 8th of May. On motion, Rev. Mr. Crowner was called to the Chair, and M. A. Henderson and Thomas C. Massey were appointed Secretaries.—The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Dill. Rev. Mr. Powell, agent of the Philadelphia Bethel Society, explained the object of the meeting, and stated many interesting facts connected with his agency on the canal, in promoting the observance of the Lord's day. He also gave an account of the deeply interesting efforts of the friends of the Sabbath in different sections of the Union, to promote its observance, and of the success with which those efforts have been crowned. The meeting was also addressed by Dr. Green, a missionary on the canal, in the employment of the Philadelphia Bethel Society.

It was resolved that delegates be appointed to attend the State Convention to be held at Harrisburg on the 30th inst., to promote the observance of the Lord's day.

The following gentlemen were appointed delegates to said convention: A. K. Cornyn, Esq., James Steel, Esq., Rev. Mr. Dill, J. G. Miles, Esq., Wm. P. Orison, Esq., A. P. Wilson, Esq., Isaac Fisher, Esq., Rev. Mr. Peebles, Rev. Mr. Furlong, John Cunningham, Esq., Maj. Wm. B. Zeigler, S. S. Wharton, Esq., Rev. Mr. Crowner, Rev. Mr. Bunker, Judge Gwin, Rev. William Gwin, and Messrs. Joseph Moore and A. Harrison.

On motion the delegates were empowered to increase their number, and fill vacancies.

On motion the Secretaries were instructed to have the proceedings of this meeting published in the newspapers of the county.

SUDDEN DEATH, APOPLEXY, BURSTING OF VESSELS, &c.—Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills are certain to prevent the at above dreadful consequences, because they purge from the body those morbid humors which, when floating in the general circulation, are the cause of a determination or rush of blood to the head, a pressure upon the brain, and other dreadful results.—From two to six of said Indian Vegetable Pills taken every night, on going to bed, will in a short time completely cleanse the body from every thing that is opposed to health that sudden death, apoplexy, bursting of blood vessels, or indeed any malady, will be in a manner impossible.

Wright's Vegetable Indian Pills also aid and improve digestion, and purify the blood and therefore give health and vigor to the whole frame, as well as drive disease of every name from the body.

Beware of Counterfeits.—The public are cautioned against the many spurious medicines which in order to deceive are made in outward appearance, closely to resemble the above wonderful Pills.

OBSERVE.—Purchase only of the advertised agents, or at the office of the General Depot, No. 169 Race street, Philadelphia, and be particular to ask for WRIGHT'S Indian Vegetable Pills.

The genuine medicines can be obtained of the store of Wm. Stewart, Huntingdon.
