The Payment of the Interest.

A JUBILEE.

The Philadelphia papers of Tuesday last were filled with glowing accounts of the rejoicing which prevailed in the city on account of the payment of the State Interest. The Inquirer says:

Much joy was expressed by all classes, and in every part of the city yesterday, on account of the payment of the interest on the public debt, and the consequent restoration of the honorable character of the Commonwealth.

At 12 o'clock, a salute of 100 guns was fired from Bush Hill, by two of our artillery companies who went through the gladsome duty with great precision and effect.

It being known that the Hon. David R. Porter, Ex-Governor of the State, was in the city a number of citizens resolved to wait upon, and congratulate him on the auspicious event. Shortly after 2 o'clock, they arrived at the American Hotel, Chestnut street, the head quarters of the Governor, accompanied by a detachment of the National Artillery, Capt. J. K. Murphy—Lieutenant Ward commanding.

The band, which by the way was capital, played several patriotic and military airs, as the military and citizens approached and entered the private apartments of the Ex-Governor.

The citizens were received with great urbanity by Mr. Porter, who was accompanied by Ovid F. Johnson, Esq. late Attorney General, and several friends.

PETER McCALL, Esq. Mayor of the city, addressed the Ex-Governor in a brief speech in which he expressed the deep emotions of gratification felt by the citizens in relation to the glorious event which they commemorated.

Governor PORTER, in his reply, observed that the honor conferred upon him was so unexpected, that he was wholly at a loss in what language to return his thanks adequately, to the citizens who had thus manifested for his conduct in relation to the State finances, so much regard and respect. He was highly gratified that any portion of his public conduct should have received the approbation of the citizens of Pennsylvania; and particularly so, that it should have been approved by the enlightened citizens of Philadelphia.

This, to him, was gratifying in the extreme. He did not consider that he was entitled to these distinguishing marks of kindness—for he had only done his duty. He had sworn, on being installed into office, to do his duty to the people; and to the best of his ability he had endeavored so to do.

When he had entered upon the gubernatorial office, he found that about $2,600,000 was due from the State to laborers, and other domestic creditors, who really could not afford to be kept out of their money. Every week of his life, at that time, he was assailed by men with tears in their eyes, who stated that their little property was about to be sold to pay the few debts they had contracted for the necessary support of their families—that their property thus forced into the market, would bring but a fraction of its real value—and all this they should suffer, because they could not obtain payment of their just dues from the Commonwealth. He rejoiced at the event which had been brought about—the payment of the State Interest. In his Messages, he had presented facts in relation to the financial condition of the State—what he knew to be facts. And he was free to say, in referring to the Treasurer of the Commonwealth (Mr. Job Mann), that the Department had never been more ably or faithfully filled, than by the gentleman who had officiated during the latter portion of his Administration. But this was not all. The tax payers would now be convinced that the taxes would be devoted to the purposes for which they were levied; and we should find that, from this day, the taxes would be cheerfully paid.

The Governor then spoke in the most cheering terms of the condition of the farmers and agriculturalists of the State; and after expressing the heartfelt pleasure which the happy and auspicious event of the day, and the congratulations of his fellow citizens afforded him,—he addressed himself to the Mayor, and concluded by saying—'I thank you, and the gentleman with you for the manifestations of regard and respect, which I have this day received at your hands. The speeches of both gentlemen were received with acclamation—the band played "Hail Columbia," and "Yankee Doodle"—and both the military and citizens, having partaken of a cold collation—the party separated, highly pleased with the proceedings.

American Indians in England.

Fourteen Iowa Indians are now in England, and have been giving exhibitions at a number of the principal towns.—They are headed by 'White Cloud,' and a correspondent of the Boston Atlas says that this Chief was unable for several days, to appear at the daily exhibitions—the great medicine man, who was sadly afflicted with rheumatism, and being sixty years of age, he suffered for a few days very much—No-ho-mun ya, one of the most active, and the best looking man of the party, was confined to his bed for three weeks. The Chief's daughter, Sophia, a girl two years old, met with an accident at Birmingham—she thrust her arm through a broken pane of glass and cut it—inflammation ensued, and it was feared that she would not survive, but she is now entirely well.

The writer adds:—It is somewhat singular that, although the very best medical attendants were immediately called in when these persons were ill, and they left their prescriptions, yet, not one Indian would take the medicines prescribed, but trusted entirely to the advice given by Se-non-ty-yah, their own doctor—and his mode of treatment was of course peculiar. In almost every case he burnt tobacco, invoked the blessing of the Great Spirit, leaned over the sick person, rubbed the juice of herbs on the body, and shook his medicine bag over it! Which of these prescriptions answered the purpose I am unable to say; but, although two or three of the Indians were at death's door, and one was pronounced actually dead, they are all now perfectly well and hearty, and are this week giving their games and dances in the ancient city of York; where Mr. Catlin has joined them to lecture upon their manners and customs, before he goes with them to Paris, where they will be exhibited with his Indian collection.—The Iowas will probably leave France for New York, in March or April next, and then return to their own beautiful prairie grounds. They have received many valuable presents since they have been in England, and they are all contented and happy; but the great expense of taking such a large party about the country has not allowed any one to realize a sufficient remuneration for the great risk attending the exhibition.
