Visit to Mr. Clay at Ashland.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 25, 1845.

Have at last realized one of my dearest wishes, that of seeing Henry Clay at Ashland. I called on him with a friend this morning, but he was absent on his farm, and Charles the "freed slave," told us he would not be at home until afternoon, so we returned to Lexington, and at 5 P. M. retraced our steps to Ashland.

Mr. Clay had returned, and meeting us at the door, took hold of our hands before I could even present a letter of introduction, and made us welcome to his house. His manners completely overcame all the ceremonies of speech I had prepared, and I was so nervous as to give my left hand instead of the right for his grasp.

up the furniture of the room. Here Mr. Clay sat in his easy chair, every thing neat and simple as his own dress, and taking his occasional pinch of snuff from a silver snuff box, on the lid of which I could see a log cabin engraved, he looked and seemed more like the quiet farmer than anything else.

Mr. Clay has lived at Ashland forty years; the place bore that name when he came to it, as he says, probably on account of the quantity of ash timber on it, and he has made it the most delightful retreat in all the West. The estate is about six hundred acres large, all under the highest cultivation, excepting some two hundred acres of Park, which is entirely cleared of underbrush and small trees, and is, to use the words of Lord Morpeth, who staid at Ashland nearly a week, the nearest approach to an English Park of any in this country.

From the road which passes his place on the Northwest side, a carriage course leads up to the house, lined with locust, express, cedar and other rare trees, and the rose, jessamine and ivy were clustering about them, and peeping through the grass and boughs like so many laughing fairies as we drove up.

Before parting with Mr. Clay, he gave me two Ashland canes, one for myself, and one for you, which I shall delight to you ere long. The sun was behind the woods when our last visit terminated, and I left the Sage Farmer with as much regret as though he had been my own brother.

On Sunday the day following my last visit to the Mansion at Ashland, I could not resist the inclination to see once more a place to me so very hallowed. On my way up I passed Mr. Clay, who with his wife had started for church—alas! thought I, as I looked upon his high, calm brow for the last time, can this be the gambler, Sabbath breaker, blasphemer, all these vice characters blended, which have been ascribed to him and cried abroad by men, whose lips were too foul to speak as great a name, as he will bear when they and their memories are less than ashes?

As it was nearly night when we called on Mr. Clay, we had hardly time to see things properly, and he urged me to come up again. I went up the day following in company with the "Swiss Bell-Ringers," who were also on a visit to Ashland.

He told me while we were walking, about Lord Morpeth's early rising while at Ashland, and said he used to go on foot a mile down to the post, and bring up the mail before he was out of bed. Some sprigs of poplery are not so truly great and humble, I surmise, but of Morpeth Mr. Clay spoke in the highest terms.

Johnson D. May, the fellow who put a small trunk on board the Steamer St. Croix, on her last trip marked and represented as containing $500 in specie, but which turned out to contain rock, had it insured in the perpetual office of this city and it is now clear that he set fire to the pressed at Ashland from the Catawba grape—it was most delicious, something like sparkling Hock in flavor, but of a richer taste.—After performing several pieces in the house, the Bell-Ringers went out into the Park and rang a chime on a peal of twelve bells, their auditors sitting in the house. I never heard anything so perfectly bewitching as the sound of the bells during the chime. Faintly the sounds came stealing through the branches of the old trees, and seemed to drop all liquid and trembling from the leaves, the air and the delicate vines climbing on the window arches.

I shall ever look upon my visit to Henry Clay as the brightest spot of my life. I have brought away from there in my recollection a thing of beauty—and Keats says:—"A thing of beauty is a joy forever."

FREE TRADE AND WAR.

Somebody has sent to Mr. Calhoun a copy of the first volume of the "League," a very interesting and able free trade periodical, published in London. Mr. Calhoun gratefully acknowledges the favor, and expresses a hope that free trade will before long be established, and that the United States will take the lead in the work.

Mr. Calhoun has been holding and expressing such opinions for many years, and, in the meantime, our country has been prospering under a tariff, and factories have been rising up on all hands to secure the true independence of the nation—factories which would never have been built, had this nation admitted "free trade" as one of its principles; yet these factories are now rising up, and overlooking the plantation even of Mr. Calhoun and giving new value to the produce of them.

Now if war should follow, as it may follow, the measure favored by Mr. Calhoun, the nation would have at least, the support of well established factories, to give employment to her non-combatants, and to supply clothing and arms for her defenders, and this in spite of Mr. Calhoun's free trade notions. We hope, however, that neither free trade nor war will be adopted, but that the blessings of peace will be continued, and the profits of home industry be constantly enjoyed.—U. S. Gazette.

A Villian.

Johnson D. May, the fellow who put a small trunk on board the Steamer St. Croix, on her last trip marked and represented as containing $500 in specie, but which turned out to contain rock, had it insured in the perpetual office of this city and it is now clear that he set fire to the boat during her trip, for the purpose of securing the insurance money—and endangering the lives of not less than fifty persons to effect his wicked design. Thank Heaven he failed, but the scoundrel should not be suffered to go at large.—Mo. Rep.

The villian alluded to has been arrested, and is now confined in the jail of this county. He arrived here on the St. Croix, and after spending some days in and about this city, embarked last week on the Lynx, for the Upper Mississippi. He deposited with the clerk of the Lynx, a box, which he represented as containing $500 in specie but which, on examination was ascertained to be lead mineral.

This circumstance led the officers of the boat to further examination, and on his person was found a bottle of camphire gas, and a bunch of Locofoco matches, with which it was believed, he meditated firing the boat. He was immediately secured and placed on the Galena, on which boat he arrived here on Friday evening last. He is now in our county jail awaiting the return of the Lynx, when he will undergo an examination.

The box shipped at St. Louis was insured through to St. Peter, and the silly rogue left that on the St. Croix, and procured another here which he placed on the Lynx.—Galena Gazette.

PROSPECTUS OF THE United States Journal.

By JESSE E. DOW & Co.

The first number of our new paper will be issued this (first) day of May, with an entire new dress—new type, fine white paper, with other important alterations and improvements. The paper will be devoted to a fearless exposition of Democratic principles; it will zealously and unremittently oppose each and every effort to establish a mammoth monarchy bank and other mischievous corporations and consolidations of wealth, which subvert the rights of the people and undermine the pillars of the Republic; it will oppose an oppressive and anti-republican tariff system, the assumption of the state debts by the General Government, and all other Federal principles which have an inevitable tendency to destroy public prosperity as well as individual happiness.

The Farmer and the Mechanic who produce all the real capital of the nation, will find in our paper an unwavering champion of their inalienable rights; the long cherished principles of the editors are too well known to the public to require any pledge upon this point. To the Miscellaneous Department particular attention will be devoted; the Ladies selection from the current literature of the day as well as original contributions from our country can boast. A general summary of Foreign and Domestic news will be furnished; a regular price current and a correct list of the prices of stocks will also be given.

The conductors have already secured the aid and co-operation of a large number of the most distinguished literary and political writers of the day; arrangements will also be made, at the earliest period possible, to embellish our columns by the contributions of correspondents from abroad. With this brief and imperfect outline of our plan, we very respectfully submit our claims to an extensive patronage to the consideration of a generous public.

THEOPHILUS FISK, JESSE E. DOW, Editors.

TERMS. Weekly paper by the year - $2 00 " " for six months - 1 00 Semi-Weekly paper by the year, in advance - 5 00 " " for less than a year 50 cts. per month. Daily paper by the year in advance 10 00 " " for less than a year $1 per month. Subscriptions to the Daily for less than two, to the Semi-Weekly for less than four, or to the Weekly for less than six months, will not be received. If not paid within the year, the Daily paper will be $12, the Semi-weekly $6, and the Weekly $2 50 a year. All payments to be made in advance.—Those who have not an opportunity of paying otherwise, may remit by mail at our risk, postage paid. The Postmaster's certificate of such remittance shall be a sufficient receipt therefor. The notes of any specie paying bank will be received. TO CLUBS AND COMPANIES.—In order to place our paper in the hands of all who may wish to subscribe, at the lowest possible price we are induced to make the following proposition: To Postmasters, Clubs, or Companies, who will send $17 50 we will send Ten Copies of our weekly paper for one year; for thirty dollars we will send Twenty Copies for twelve months; and for Fifty dollars, we will forward FORTY COPIES for a year—reducing the price to each subscriber, to one dollar and twenty-five cents per annum. We hope that this proposed reduction in the price, will induce the most active exertions on the part of our friends in obtaining us subscribers.

Mill & Farms For Sale. The subscribers having determined to close their business in Wells Valley, Bedford county, they for sale all their property, viz:

The Merchant Mill—This Mill has just been finished, and embraces all the latest improvements—has three run of stone—the steam permanent, with 20 feet fall, and from its location must command constant employment—there not being any other Mill within 10 miles of it. To the Mill is attached
