McConnellstown Celebration. A Union Sabbath School celebration was held at McConnellstown on Saturday August 9th, composed of the Rysatown Branch, Harrislog, and McConnellstown Sabbath Schools.

At an early hour in the day they assembled at the Church, and after some preliminary arrangements were made they formed in procession, headed by the McConnellstown Band, and here and there graced by beautiful banners with appropriate inscriptions thereon--and moved en masse to a grove close by, where seats and stands had been previously erected.

- 1. Music by the Band. 2. Hymn by the schools. 3. Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Lee. 4. Hymn by the schools. 5. Address on the benefit of Sabbath Schoolists, by the Rev. Mr. Lee. 6. Music by the Band. 7. Address on the duty of parents, by the Rev. Mr. Bonker.

Here an interval of an hour or two intervened, while the schools and spectators partook of an excellent and bountiful repast prepared for the occasion, when the exercises were again resumed and gone through with as follows:

- 1. Music by the Band. 2. Address to the children by the Rev. Mr. Rivell. 3. Music by the Band. 4. Address on the duties of Sabbath School Teachers, by the Rev. Mr. Willard. 5. Music by the Band. 6. Benediction by the Rev. Mr. Willard.

A very large number of persons were in attendance, and every thing passed off in admirable manner, highly gratifying to the whole assembly, and reflecting much credit on the assembled schools, for their good order and pleasing appearance.

Who Struck Billy Patterson? Billy-doggy, rumpsey-dumpsey. Here's the "hoos" what killed Tecumseh.

The long disputed fact, as to who killed Tecumseh, has just been brought to light, in the present political canvass in Kentucky. Major Lewis Figg, of Nelson county, proves to be the bona fide slayer, as the following correspondence plainly shows:--Major F. in his address to the freemen of old Nelson, published in the Bardstown Sentinel, of the 25th ult., observes:

"I will not detail the privations and hardships I endured on that occasion, but I will only allude to a few of the scenes that are most fresh in my recollection. The first engagement, of any importance I was in, the battle of the Thames, in which that wild and subtle foe, Tecumseh, was slain, as many suppose by Col. Johnson--but I will easily convince you that this credit belongs to myself. Col. Johnson and myself were messmates in this campaign, and we were both severely and dangerously wounded in the above battle. We were both nursed in the same tent, and attended by the same surgeon. Soon after the battle, and after we were both convalescent, the Colonel and myself were lying talking over the events of the battle, and the death of Tecumseh. The Colonel, knowing that it was I had killed Tecumseh, remarked to me--as I never expected to become a public man, I must let him have the credit of killing Tecumseh, as it would be of essential service to him in his intended political canvassing. I replied to him, that I would do so, but should I ever become a candidate, and it was necessary for my success, that the truth must be told;--this the Colonel readily assented to. In view of this understanding, as soon as I determined to become a candidate, I addressed the following note to Colonel Johnson:

BOSTON, Ky., June 1st, 1851. Dear Colonel,--In the course of human events, it has become necessary for me to present myself before the people for office. I opine that I shall stand in need of all the external aid I can get. I am therefore compelled to ask your permission to make public the true secret of the death of Tecumseh, and the slayer thereof. I hope this will put you to no public inconvenience.

I am, as ever, your old friend and messmate.

LEWIS FIGG. To this letter I received the following prompt reply:

GREAT CROSSINGS, June 6th, 1845. My Dear Figg:--Yours of the 1st instant, was received by me this morning--I hasten to reply. After declaring in all sincerity, my delight in hearing once more from my old friend and messmate, I will say, I well remember the circumstances of that eventful day on which Tecumseh was slain. Now that I am no longer a candidate for public office, and having retired to the shades of private life, I have no cause to regret your making known the real Tecumseh killer. I entirely ought to rest satisfied with what the reputation of it has done for me, and am now willing that you should reap all the advantages from it you can. The girls boys leave to be remembered to you, and we would be pleased to see you at the Great Crossings.

Yours, truly, R. M. JOHNSON.

Some of my friends thought it would be a breach of confidence in me to publish this letter--fearing it might be so considered. I submitted the question to my old friend, John Pope, who advised me that it would not be considered in that light--even if it was, that the Colonel ought to be the last man in the world to complain of a breach of confidence.

General Harrison, in his official report of the battle of the Thames, addressed to the Secretary of War, was pleased to make mention of the gallant part I bore on that occasion.

NEW STATES.

It has been announced, with some degree of "officiality," that Texas was to be a twin birth--two states were to be admitted, viz:--"Texas" and "Austin." We do not know what is the number of inhabitants in the last named sovereignty, (a posse,) but, of course, there will be enough to fill the State offices of profit. There may be a double of a Chief Justice, and a High Constable, and between a Governor and a Town Clerk; and it is thought encouragement will be given to emigration, in order to insure two United States Senators, and one member of the House of Representatives in Congress. Most of the other offices will be given to the women.

This cutting up of Texas, in order to multiply slave votes in Congress is, we are happy to say, likely to be met with a correspondent action. The State of Rhode Island will probably be divided, as Massachusetts once was; and the little Commonwealth has a peculiar convenience, as if, indeed, she was made to be two, as her heavy name and sovereign title is a double one, being the "State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations," so that all will go smoothly and pleasantly. Should the South continue her polytypic operations, it is understood that the islands of "the Sound," viz: Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard, and Elizabeth, will set up for themselves each a separate sovereignty, for the purposes of representation in Congress, while all will have a sort of bond of union, forming themselves into a federative republic, like the Ionian Isles of the Mediterranean. There can be no doubt of the success of these efforts. All that is wanted is the first step, that taken, and Tinnicum will declare itself free and independent, so that nothing will be gained by the chipping up process of the South. We, of course, can have nothing to do with the proceedings at the east, but we say in advance, all hail Tinnicum!!--U. S. Gazette.

HINTS FOR THE YOUNG.

Exemplified by the life of a Huntingdon County man.

We take much pleasure in laying before our readers the following notice of a worthy son of old Huntingdon. It is from the pen of the editor of the Pittsburg Gazette--

"Messrs. Luce and Worstell, of the Massillon Gazette, have sold their establishment to D. B. Wilson and J. S. Drew. Our friend Joseph Wilson of the Steubenville Gazette, has sold his establishment to Messrs. Perviances, and retired to private life. The editor of the Repository is the only one in the State who has continued to publish a paper 30 years without intermission. If there is another we should be pleased to know who he is."

The above paragraph we find in the Canton (Ohio) Repository, published and edited by JOHN SAXTON, Esq., who as he tells us, has occupied the same position for the last thirty years. Mr. Saxton aptly exemplifies what may be accomplished by patient and persevering industry and consistent probity of character, in the absence of any very brilliant intellectual powers. Mr. Saxton is a native of Huntingdon county in this State, where his father to a ripe old age has shed forth the beauties of a consistent Christian character. On the breaking out of the last war, young SAXTON, having just completed his apprenticeship in a printing office, joined a volunteer corps which was ordered to our northern frontier, on the Niagara river, where he served with acceptability until his term of service expired. In the spring of 1814, having by industry accumulated a little money, and purchased, partly on credit, materials for a small printing office; and having united his fortunes and happiness with those of his present estimable lady, he turned his face to the then western wilderness, and settled in Canton, where he still resides. Here he started the "Ohio Repository," which he still continues to publish. At that early day but few papers were published in the Northern and North eastern part of Ohio, and the Repository circulated through all the counties west, where any settlements were found. It was printed on a medium sheet, and Long Primer and Pica Type, and was a very handsome paper for the time. Mr. SAXTON was young, healthy, persevering and poor, but determined to succeed. Such was his energy, that he performed all the work of his office himself, until he could instruct apprentices to assist him,--being at once editor, compositor, pressman and "devil," and he never failed to bring out his sheet at the right time. Besides this he executed a good deal of job work for his own county, and the counties round. In these arduous labors he was assisted and cheered by his wife, who was a helpmate indeed. Many a column of the Repository was put up in type by her hands, while her house always presented a pattern of neatness and comfort. Can it be wondered, then, that Mr. SAXTON prospered! He soon paid off the debts against his office, and purchased a handsome property, and for many years has lived in comparative affluence, on the fruits of his patient industry and perseverance, respected by all who know him for his integrity and good sense.

We write this little history for the purpose of pointing young men to it as an example worthy of imitation. The secret of Mr. SAXTON'S success may be found chiefly in three things. 1. His industry. He truly exemplified the proverb, "Time is money." He never employed others to do that which he could do himself, because he feared it would be beneath his dignity. He put his own hands to the work, and thus secured the cordial co-operation of all under his employ. 2. His perseverance. No difficulties destroyed his determination to succeed. It also formed in him a fixedness of habit, which is essential to success in any undertaking. "A rolling stone gathers no moss." A man always changing his occupation or his residence can never succeed, while steady perseverance under even discouraging circumstances, will generally eventually be crowned with success. Had Mr. SAXTON become disheartened with the slow and small returns of his industry, and impatiently sought for some new et dorado, or some more thriving business, his habits would most likely become unsettled, and, as fresh disappointments followed him, he would have made fresh changes, until he became of little use to himself or society. Thousands of fair fortunes in prospect are ruined in this way, and the unfortunate changing has at last in poverty and sorrow to mourn over his blighted hopes and mis-spent days, the result of his hurry to get rich, and his discontent with a slow and may be laborious road to prosperity. 3. His integrity. This secured to him the esteem and respect of all parties, and often his fellow citizens called him to offices of honor and profit in his adopted country.

But we wish to call the attention of the young members of our own profession to the encouraging example which this case affords. Mr. SAXTON has now edited the Repository for 31 years, and it has ever been considered as a good newspaper, has enjoyed a wide circulation, and been esteemed by the members of the press. And yet Mr. SAXTON makes no pretensions to abilities as a writer, and writes less probably for his paper than any editor in the country, certainly far less than any editor whose paper stands as high. His success is to be attributed to his fact in selections and the consistency of his political character. He takes care that nothing of utility to his readers shall fail to reach them, and he has steadily, throughout reverses, supported the principles of the Whig party. Such a man could not fail to succeed.

What we wish to impress upon young men is--that success in life does not depend upon brilliant abilities, or any peculiar favorable circumstances in setting out in the world, such as wealthy friends, a handsome fortune, or a flourishing business. These frequently prove the rocks on which the happiness of the future life is shipwrecked. All a young American needs to secure success, is integrity, perseverance, and industry--with these, he may carve his way to independence and happiness, if not to fortune and fame. Without these, all other fortuitous circumstances cannot save from final ruin and shame.

PITTSBURG.

Our manufacturing establishments which were destroyed by the great fire, have indeed been rebuilt with surprising rapidity, and in a handsome and substantial style, which betokens the energy and sound business condition which has ever characterized the Pittsburg manufacturers.

Messrs. Bakewell & Pears have already removed their counting-room to their new works, and it is their expectation to recommence the manufacture of glass on this day week.

On Saturday we were pleased to hear the sound of the hammer and anvil at the new works of Messrs. Livingston, Roggen, & Co., Platform Scale & Knagghly Mill manufacturers, at the corner of Front and Grant sts. Their new works are very extensive, and are handsomely and substantially constructed, with fire proof roofs.

Messrs. Jones & Quigg, Steel and Coach

Spring manufacturers, have been some weeks at work in their newly erected building.

Mr. A. Fulton, Bell and Brass Founder, was one of the first at work in the Burnt District.

Many warehouses of the largest class, and numerous dwelling houses, are already occupied, and hundreds of others will be ready for their tenants within the next month.

Messrs. Lyon & Shorb, Burbridge & Wilson, Wm. Holmes & Co., R. Townsend & Co., James Anderson, Pollard McCormick, James Park & Co., Black & McKee, all extensive dealers in their various branches, and some hundreds of others whose names do not occur to us, are already established in their new warehouses and manufactories. And establishments not in the Burnt District are also erecting new buildings.

We noticed some time since that the Messrs. Shoenbergers were making large additions to their Iron Works in the Fifth Ward. We learn from the Gazette that they are about erecting another rolling mill and forge, which will make three rolling mills and forges belonging to their establishment.

All these things our city may well be proud of, and it gives us great pleasure to record them.--Pittsburg Chronicle.

A Dreadful Steamboat Explosion. LIVES LOST.

It became our painful duty, says the St. Louis Reveille of the 25th ult., to record one of the most serious disasters that has occurred upon our waters since the explosion of the steamer "Edna." The steamer Big Hatchee, Capt. Frisbee, which left St. Louis on the 20th inst., for the Mississippi river, with some forty passengers on board, in leaving the landing at Hannan, about ten o'clock on the morning of the 23d inst., on her way to St. Joseph, burst her starboard boiler with a loud explosion, which forced it straight forward overboard, the steam discharging itself aloft, carrying away the main cabin as far aft as the ladies' cabin, making a perfect wreck of the boat, and spreading death and desolation among the passengers.

The explosion scalded some twenty or thirty persons, and five or six were killed. The St. Louis Reporter, of the 26th says there were twenty five persons instantaneously killed by the explosion on board this boat; three had subsequently died, and ten others would certainly die of the injuries inflicted.

A SAILOR ASHORE.

The N. York Commercial of Wednesday evening says, that one John Wilson, an "old salt" who had just returned from a six months cruise on the "salt sea ocean," and had his pockets lined pretty well with current bills, was induced to join in a game of thimble rig in the neighborhood of Burling slip. "Old salt" soon lost forty dollars, which rather opened his eyes, and he was not long in detecting some sinister movements. Thereupon his wrath was kindled, and Jack in a voice of thunder demanded back his money. As other sailors soon joined him, the gamblers thought it prudent to make a show of contrition and restitution. "Here" said one of the gang with an oath, "is your money," throwing him a $20 bill of the Farmers' Bank of Cattaraugus co., $10 of West Florida, and another $10 purporting to be of the Chippewa Bank, all spurious of course. When poor Wilson found out the trick, he made complaint at the police office and had two fellows arrested, but could not identify them, and they were discharged.
