

From the Rainbow.
LOVE.
Love lurks under smiles—yea oft under frowns.
Very oft under rags—sometimes under "gowns."
The Parson, the Doctor, the Lawyer, the Judge,
(Though would you believe them—tis all a mere fudge)
Submit to love's sway and acknowledge its power—
Just see how they long for that sweet happy hour,
When freed from the cares and turmoil of life
They fly to the arms of a dear loving wife.
The Farmer returning with labour oppressed
Thinks none can be happy—none can be blessed,
Without a dear partner to share in his toil—
She 'tends to the household, and he to the soil.
Mechanics and labourers of every degree,
Though different their callings, in this all agree,
That love is the main-spring—observe how they grieve
If they lose a false daughter of old mother Eve—
False did I say? I only meant "fickle!"
For al, the dear sex when they "get in a pickle"
And find they have injured themselves and their swain.
How soon they relent, and restore hima gain!
The poet too labours, for what? The sweet hour
When fame is secured, to yield to love's power
And fondly indulge in the heart-thrilling strife,
Shall he love the dearest or shall a loved wife
"But what has all this," perhaps you will say,
"To do with the SALE you are holding to day?"
Why—Husbands and beaux, we wish you to prove
Your kindness, by buying for your "Lady-love"
Some trinket or trifle—don't question the price,
Be only assured, that the article's "nice."
And Ladies, sweet Sisters, to you we appeal—
Let gentlemen know, you have hearts that do feel.
For the truth must be told—the "Trustees" of our Church
Unless you assist will be left in the lurch.
The "House" is unfinished, and cash they have none—
They have borrowed and beg'd till credit is gone.
But they know where to go, when harassed and grieved,
To woman—fond woman who never deceives!
Then fly to the rescue—your money, in brief,
Quite as much as your smiles, will bring them relief.

Burying Alive.
There can be little doubt that burying alive is much more frequent than the world suppose, or has and inclination to believe. There are conditions of suspended life, so closely resembling death, and of such long continuance, as to deceive the physician and induce sepulture. The late eminent and most worthy Philip Doddridge was within an ace of meeting the dreadful fate of being buried alive, and what made it worse, with a perfect consciousness of all that was passing. He was supposed to be dead, having fallen into a state exactly resembling death, so far as the body is concerned: His pulse and respiration ceased, his limbs became rigid, his face assumed the sharp outline characteristic of death, and he remained in this condition until the family physicians and friends (all but one) supposed that his spirit had passed. That one was Mrs. Doddridge; her love refused to despair, and she continued to use remedy after remedy to restore animation. Finally she procured a spoonful of brandy (a case of breach of teetotalism which we think Father Matthew himself would excuse) and the powerful stimulant almost immediately dissolved the trance, and restored Mr. Doddridge to the command of his limbs, and to many years of distinguished usefulness. But for it, he had in all probability been buried alive; for the weather was warm, and he already shrouded for his last abode. He used to relate, with thrilling effect, his sensations during the time of his supposed death. He could not stir a little finger to give notice of being alive, but his sense of hearing remained perfect, and his mind collected. He heard the feet of his being dead announced, and the outburst of grief that followed, the directions for shrouding him, and the useful preparations in the chamber of death! Desperate, but vain as desperate, were his efforts to give some token of life—not a muscle could he move. Even despair, and the immediate presence of a fate more appalling probably to the conscious than Hell itself, could not rouse his dormant body to perform the slightest of its functions! At last he heard Mrs. Doddridge call for the brandy, with a delight and rapture of love for her in which the honors of his country could easily explain. He felt that he was saved, and he was saved. He himself wittily said, that it was as little as the brandy could do to accomplish his resurrection, as it had produced his living death!

When we reflect, that of the buried, the coffin of probably not one in many millions is afterwards examined, and that yet among these few, several instances have occurred in which it was obvious (as from the deceased having turned on his side) that the dead had been buried too soon, we cannot well reject the horrible conclusion to which we have not so far as our shuddering natures would desire it. An examination of the catombs of Paris, some years ago, (where the dead are stowed away in open boxes, or simply deposited in the vault,) led to the discovery that some had turned over on their sides, and others had quit their places and died at a distance in the agencies of famine, having knawed away their only flesh.

The following authenticated and affecting story has suggested these reflections:
"In the year 1810, a case of living inhumation happened in France, attended with circumstances which go far to warrant the assertion that truth is, indeed, stranger than fiction. The heroine of the story was Mademoiselle Lafosse, a young girl of illustrious family, of wealth and of great personal beauty. Among her numerous suitors was Julien Bousset, a poor literature, or journalist, of Paris. His talents and general amiability had recommended him to the notice of the heiress, by whom he seemed to have been truly beloved; but her pride of birth decided her, finally, to reject him, and to wed a Monsieur Renelle, a banker and a diplomatist of some eminence. After marriage, however, this gentleman neglected, and perhaps, more positively ill-treated her. Having passed with him some wretched years, she died,—at least her condition so closely resembled death that she deceived every one who saw her. She was buried—not in a vault—but in an ordinary grave in the village of her nativity. Filled with despair and still inflamed by the memory of a profound attachment, the lover journeys from the capital to the remote province in which the village lies, with the romantic purpose of disintering the corpse, and possessing himself of its luxuriant tresses. He reaches the grave. At midnight he an-earths the coffin, opens it, and is in the act of detaching the hair, when he is arrested by the unclosing of the beloved eyes. In fact the lady had been buried alive. Vitality had not altogether departed; and she was aroused by the carcases of her lover, from the lethargy which had been mistaken for death. He bore her frantically to his lodging in the village. He employed certain powerful restoratives suggested by no little medical learning; in fine, she revived. She recognized her preserver. She remained with him until by slow degrees, she fully recovered her original health. Her woman's heart was not adamant and the last lesson of love sufficed to soften it. She returned no more to her husband, but concealing from him her resurrection, fled with Bousset to America. Twenty years afterwards, the two returned to France in the persuasion that time had so greatly altered the lady's appearance that her friends would be unable to recognize her. They were mistaken, however, for at the first meeting, Monsieur Renelle did actually recognize and make claim to his wife. The claim she resisted; and a judicial tribunal sustained her in her resistance; deciding that the peculiar circumstances, with the long lapse of years, had extinguished not only equitably but legally the authority of the husband."

DR. J. H. DORSEY,
HAVING removed from Williamsburg to Huntingdon, would inform the community that he designs to continue the practice of medicine, and will be thankful for their patronage. Residence and office formerly occupied by B. Allison, Esq.
N. B. Having been successful in accomplishing the cure of a number of cancers, (for which vouchers can be had if required) he feels confident of success in the most obstinate cases, and should he fail in curing no charge will be made.
Huntingdon, April 23, 1845.

TO SENSIBLE CITIZENS.—We know from what we see and feel, that the animal body is, in its organs and functions, subject to derangement, inducing pain, and tending to its destruction. In this disordered state, we observe nature providing for the re-establishment of order, by exciting some salutary evacuation of the morbid matter, or by some other operation, which escapes our imperfect senses and researches. In some cases she brings on a crisis by the bowels, in others by sweating, &c. &c.
Now experience has taught us that there are certain substances, by which, applied to the living body, internally or externally, we can at will produce the same evacuations, and thus do in a short time, what nature could do but slowly, and do effectually what she might not have strength to accomplish. When then we have seen a disease cured by a certain natural evacuation, should that disease occur again, we may count upon curing it by the use of such substances, as we know bring about the same evacuation, which we had before observed to cure a similar disease. It is in consequence of the power which the Brandreth Pills exert upon the whole system, that makes them so universally beneficial. It is because they impart to the body, the power to expel disease without leaving any evil effect.
As a general family medicine, Brandreth's Pills are, it is believed by the Proprietor, superior to every other offered to the public. Dr. Brandreth's Pills are for sale by the following Agents in this county.

TESTIMONIALS.
TO THE PUBLIC.—In accordance with the prevailing custom, and in order to show the virtues of this medicine more fully, the following certificates have been selected; and as it is not our wish to trifle with the lives or health of those afflicted, we sincerely pledge ourselves to make no assertions or "false statements" of its efficacy; nor will we hold out any hope to suffering humanity which facts will not warrant. The proofs are here given—and we solicit an inquiry from the public into every case we publish, and feel assured they will find it a medicine well deserving their patronage and confidence.

REMARKABLE CURES.
Of all the cures that have yet been recorded, there are certainly none equal to the below mentioned, and they plainly show the curability of Consumption, even in some of its worst forms:
Let every man, woman and child read the following, and we are sure that it must satisfy all of the great virtues of this medicine.

Read the following from Dr. Jacob Hoffman, a physician of extensive practice in Huntingdon county:
Dear Sir—I procured one bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, from Thomas Read, Esq., of this place, and tried it in a case of obstinate Asthma on a child of Paul Schwelbe, in which many other remedies had been tried without any relief. The Balsam gave sudden relief, and in my opinion the child is effectually cured by its use.
Yours, &c.
JACOB HOFFMAN, M. D.
Dec. 23, 1841.

The case of Thomas Cozens is related by himself as follows, and acknowledged by all who knew him to be one of the most astonishing and extraordinary cures ever performed:
HADDONFIELD, N. J. }
April 20, 1843. }
On or about the 13th of October, 1841, I was taken with a violent pain in the side near the Liver, which continued about five days, and was followed by the breaking of an ulcer, or something inwardly, which relieved the pain a little, but caused me to throw up a great quantity of offensive matter and also much blood. Being greatly alarmed at this I applied to a physician who said he thought he could do but little for me except give me some mercury pills which I refused to take feeling satisfied that they could do me no good; many other remedies were then procured by my wife and friends but none did me any good and the discharge of blood and putrid corruption still continued every few days, and at the last it became so offensive that I could scarcely breathe. I was also seized with a violent cough, which at times caused me to raise much more blood than I had formerly done, and my disease continued in this way until February, when all hopes of my recovery were given up, and my friends all thought that I would die of a galloping consumption. At this moment when my life apparently was drawing near to its close, I heard of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry and got a bottle which relieved me immediately, and by the use of only three bottles of this medicine, all my pains were removed, and my cough and spitting of blood removed, and in a few days my health was so far restored as to enable me to work at my trade (which is that of a carpenter) and up to this time I have enjoyed good health.

THOMAS COZENS.
WITNESS.—I am acquainted with Thos Cozens and having seen him during his illness, I think his statement is entitled to full credit.

THE SUREST, THE BEST, AND THE ONLY REMEDY.
All the newspapers are full of patent remedies for coughs, colds, croup, and various other "diseases which flesh is heir to," proceeding from wet feet; but all experience teaches that "an ounce of preventive is better than a pound of cure," and, having the means of furnishing the former article on short notice. Therefore
Charles S. Black
respectfully informs the good citizens of the borough of Huntingdon, and the public generally, that he still continues the
