

BABYLON.

This city, the capital of Chaldea, was built by Nimrod, adjacent to the tower of Babel. It was the capital of Nimrod's empire: so that its antiquity is unquestionable. The city was square, fifteen miles, every way. The whole circuit being of sixty miles. The walls were built with large bricks, cemented with bitumen, a thick glutinous fluid which rises out of the earth in the country hereabouts; it binds stronger than mortar, and becomes harder than the brick itself. These walls were eighty-seven feet thick, and three hundred and fifty feet high. Those authors who mention them as only fifty cubits high, refer to their condition, after Darius, son of Hystaspes, had commanded them to be demolished down to that height, as a punishment for a rebellion of the Babylonians.

The city was encompassed with a vast ditch, which was filled with water; and brick work was carried up on both sides. The earth which was dug out, was employed in making the brick for the walls of the city; so that one may judge of the depth and width of the ditch by the extreme height and thickness of the walls. There were a hundred gates to the city, twenty-five on each of the four sides: these gates, with their posts, &c. were of brass. Between every two of these gates were three towers, raised ten feet above the walls, where necessary; for the city being encompassed in several places with marshes which defend the approach to it, there was no need of towers on those parts.

A street answered to each gate, so that there were fifty streets in all, cutting one another at right angles; each fifteen miles in length, and one hundred and fifty-one feet wide. Four other streets having houses only on one side, the ramparts being on the other, made the whole compass of the city; each of these streets was two hundred feet wide. As the streets of Babylon crossed one another at right angles, they formed six hundred and seventy-six squares, each square four furlongs and a half on every side, making two miles and a quart in circuit. The houses of these squares were three or four stories high, their fronts were adorned with embellishments, and the inner space was courts and gardens.

The Euphrates divided the city into two parts, running from north to south. A bridge of admirable structure, about a furlong in length, and sixty feet wide, formed the communication over the river; at the two extremities of this bridge were two palaces, the old palace on the east side of the river, the new palace on the west. The temple of Belus, which stood near the old palace, occupied one entire square; the city was situated in a vast plain, whose soil was extremely fat and fruitful.

To people this immense city, Nebuchadnezzar transplanted hither an infinite number of captives from among the many nations subdued by him.

Something should be said of those famous hanging gardens which adorned the palace in Babylon, which are ranked among the wonders of the world.

They contained four hundred feet square; they were composed of several large terraces; the platform of the highest terrace equalled the walls of Babylon in height—three hundred and fifty feet.—From one terrace to that above it, was an ascent by stairs ten feet wide. This whole mass was supported by large vaults built one upon another, and strengthened by a wall twenty-two feet thick, covered with stones, rushes, and bitumen, and plates of lead, to prevent leaking.

There was so great a depth of earth that the largest trees might take root. Here was every thing that could please the sight; the largest trees, flowers, plants and shrubs. On the highest terrace, was an aqueduct supplied with water from the river. From whence the garden was watered. It is affirmed, that Nebuchadnezzar undertook this wonderful and famous edifice, out of complaisance to his wife Amytis, the daughter of Astyages; who, being a native of Media, retained strong inclinations for mountains and forests, which abounded in her native country.

In the year of the world thirty-four hundred and sixty-six, Cyrus the king of Persia, took the city of Babylon, by turning the river Euphrates, and marching his troops through its former channel, while the people were celebrating a grand festival. From this period, Babylon experienced a rapid decay, till it was taken by Alexander the Great, about two hundred years after. He, with a view of making it the seat of his empire, had determined to restore it to its ancient splendor; but dying suddenly, the work ceased.—His successors abandoning this proud capital forever, it continued to decline, till it became desolate. Not the smallest vestige of it now remains; and the exact place where it stood is unknown.

An Irishman recommending a cow, said she would give good milk, year after year, without having calves, because it run in the breed, as she came from a cow that never had a calf.

Jim, if you don't behave yourself, I'll give you a good whipping.

Well, ma, I wish you would, for I'll be hanged if you ever gave me a licking that I called good yet!

A sensible writer observes that those who pay compliments seldom pay anything else.

Patent Cooking Stove.
RIGHT SIDE UP!
I WOULD respectfully inform the public, that I shall continue as heretofore, to act as Agent for the sale and delivery of the justly celebrated Hathaway Cooking Stove, manufactured by A. B. Long & Co., who have at a heavy expense secured the exclusive right of Patentee of Huntingdon and other counties.

No bombastic eulogy is deemed essential to add to the already acquired celebrity of this stove. It is necessary, however, to observe that the high reputation this stove has gained by practical use, has induced the manufacturers of other and inferior articles, to borrow (not to use a harsher term) the name of HATHAWAY, and prefix it to an "Improved," in order to make their inferior trash go off as genuine, and thereby impose upon the public. I myself, sell the only REAL HATHAWAY stove that is or can be sold in this county, and would therefore admonish the public against the imposition above alluded to. I am happy in being able to say, confidently, that during the last three or four years, in which I have been constantly dealing in and putting up these stoves, I have found them to give universal and unbounded satisfaction. Any communication in relation to stoves addressed to me at Lewistown, Mifflin county, (my place of residence) will meet with the earliest possible attention.
A few good sound horses will be taken in exchange for stoves.
JAMES A. PEIRCE,
Lewistown, Mifflin Co., Nov. 19, 1845.

TESTIMONIALS.

Messrs. SANFORD & PARK—Dear Sirs:—With regard to Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, for which you are wholesale agents, we have sold, since last October, eighty-two bottles at retail, and have heard from a great portion of them as producing the desired effect.

Several important cases in this vicinity, which came under our personal knowledge have been cured!—where other remedies have been tried for years without effect.

In fact, we think it one of the most invaluable remedies for consumption of the lungs and all other complaints for which it is recommended; and do think, that the suffering of the afflicted demand, that you should give it a general circulation, and make its virtues known. Yours, truly,
WEAGLY & KNEPPER, Druggists.
Wooster, O., May 20, 1845.

[From the Cincinnati Daily Times of May 30th 1845.]

"Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry."—We should judge from Messrs. Weagly & Knepper's letter, published this day among our advertisements, that this popular remedy for coughs, lung complaints, and diseases of the breast generally, was really a valuable medicine, and worthy of serious attention from the public. We are informed by the wholesale agents, that they are almost daily receiving similar letters from all parts of the West.

We would advise our readers who are laboring under an affection of the lungs, to make immediate trial of this truly excellent medicine. The most intelligent and respectable families of our city have adopted it as a favorite family medicine; and persons predisposed to consumption who have used it, speak in the highest terms of its efficacy."

Read the following from Dr. Jacob Hoffman, a physician of extensive practice in Huntingdon county:

Dear Sir:—I procured one bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, from Thomas Read, Esq., of this place, and tried it in a case of obstinate Asthma on a child of Paul Schwebel, in which many other remedies had been tried without any relief. The Balsam gave sudden relief, and in my opinion the child is effectually cured by its use. Yours, &c.
JACOB HOFFMAN, M. D.
