Ah! think'st thou I would bow me down
And lick the dust before thy feet,
Or tremble at thy demon frown,
And oaths that fiends would scarce repeat?

Look on this brow, this sun-burnt cheek, And tell me then, if thou canst see Aught there that seem'st to mark or speak A craven, menial soul in me.

Av, look now on this stalwart frame Its sinewy limbs, and tell me then
If I was born to bow in sha.ne
Before the glance of other men.

No, I was never marked a slave— The God I worship made me free, And that free spirit which ho gave, Fears not, nor bends to man like thee

Go make you fawning reptile shake And cringe, like spaniels, at thy nod, Those fools that think that wealth can make The very prince of hell a god.

Yes, go and show thy lordly pride .--Rejoice to see such menials cower Beneath thy glance, while I decide Thy threatenings, and defy thy power.

Many persons are extremely unhappy in the mirried state; because they were forced into connections against their own choice, or commenced them voluntarily against sortidi motives, and not from the influence of a rational and reciprocal esteem. Others review their union with regret, because they matched themselves with unsuitable companions, in a precipitate, heedless or clandestine manner, or because they indulge expectations of happiness which no human virtue could authorise, and which nothing but juvenile ardor and inexperience could excuse. Many of the best formed alliances are sometimes changed into the bitterest sorrow, by inconstancy and cruel neglect on one side, or by strange inattention, or suspicious levity on the other.—Some even honest and pious people are known to render each other miserable in the extreme by indulging cross tempers, or by an obstinate and uncharitable adherence to different modes of r. lizion. Many also mar the happiness tempers, or by an obstinate and uncharitable adherence to different modes of r. lizion. Many also mar the happiness their unnon might afford, by withing to exercise unreasonable authority; in which respect we presume, the ladies are not quite, innocent; we may likewise add, the want of an open and unreserved confidence in every thing that concerns their mutual interests, aggravated by the absence of true religion, whose sal ary influence, if duly felt, would soften the aspertites and improve the endearments of life. To these causes, the greatest number of unhappy matches may be ascribed; which instead of resulting from the unavoidable arrangements of Nature and Providence, originate in the preveneness of mankind themselves, and might easily be removed or deminished by the mutual candor, prudence, and self-government of each party.

We like a good story, and the last num-ber of Blackwood furnishes one as follows:

We fike a good vory, and the last number of Blackwood furnishes one as follows:

"Some years ago, when all the world were mad upon lotteries, the cook of a middle aged gentleman drew from his hands the savings of some years. Her master curious to know the cause, learned that she had repeatedly dreamed a certain number was a great prize, and she had bought it. He called her a fool for her pains, and never omitted an occasion to tease her upon the subject. One day, however, the master saw in the newspaper, or at his bookseller, s in the country town, that the number was actually the twenty thousand pounds prize,—Cook is called up, a palaver ensues—had known each other for many years, loth to part, &c.—in short, he proposes and is excepted, but insists on marrage being celebrated next morning. Married they were, and as the carriage took them from the church, they enjoyed the following dialogue:

church, they enjoyed the following dialogue:
Well, Molly—two happy events in one day. You have married, I trust, a good husband. You have something else—but first let me ask you where you have locked up your lottery ticket??"
"Molly, who thought that her master was only bantering her upon the old point, cried, "Don't ye say no more about it. I thought how it would be, and that I never should hear the end on't, so I sold it to the baker of our village for a guinea profit; so you need never be augry with me again about that."

A NEW JOHN GILPIN.—The Lebanon Star tells a good rail-road anecdote. The other day when the cars stoped, on the way to Xenia, for a moment, a countryman mounted the locomotive to see what he could learn. In the progress of his investigation, he took hold of a crank and giving it a turn, with the speed of the wind off sprang the locomotive, detached from the car, while all that could be heard of the unlucky wight was—Stop her, stop her, stop the darn'd thing!—But regardless of his cries, on it went, whizzing and snorting, and was only arrested in its progress, at the distance of seven miles, by running off the track. No harm was done—the only inconvenience being the necessary labor and detention of getting back the truant locomotive, and the awful fright to its rider John Gilpin.

cclusive right of Patentee of Huntingdor ad other counties. No bombastic eulogy is decemed essential add to the already acquired celebrity of its stove. It is necessary, however, to observe that the high reputation this stove has ained by practical use, has induced the manfecturers of other and inferior articles, to orrow (not to use a harsher term) the name of HATHAWAY, and prefix it to an "Improved," in order to make their inferior rash go off as genuine, and thereby impose ipon the public. I, myself, sell the only LEZAL HATHAWAY stove that is or can be sold in this county, and would therefore characters in the public against the imposition sold in this county, and would therefore monish the public against the imposition rove alluded to. I am happy in being able say, confidently, that during the last three four years, in which I have been conantly dealing in and putting up these stoves, have found them to give universal and thounded satisfaction. Any communication in relation to stoves addlessed to me attestion, Mifflin county, (my place of sidence) will meet with the earliest position of the strength of the s

[From the Cincinnati Daily Times of May 30th 1843.

"Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.—We should judge from Messrs. Weagely & Knepper's letter, published this day among our advertisements, that this popular remedy for coughs, lung complaints, and diseases of the breast generally, was really a valuable medicine, and worthy of serious attention from the public. We are inforced by the wholesale agents, that they are almost daily receiving similar letters from all parts of the West.

We would advise our readers who are laboring under an affection of the lungs, to make immediate trial of this truly excellent medicine. The most intelligent and respectable families of our city have adopted it as a favorite family medicine; and persons-predisposed to consumption who have used it, speak in the highest terms of its efficacy."
