POETRY, SONG.

BY GRACE GREENWOOD. We must silence with words of cold reason The eloquent voice of the heart; For Love hath staid out his brief season, And spread his young wing to depart!

The Heart's Guests. When age has cast its shadows O'er life's declining way, When evening twilight gathers Round our retiring day, Then shall we sit and ponder On the dim and shadowy past, In the heart's silent chamber, The guests will gather fast.

Tremendous Hail Storm. A letter in the Missouri Republican, dated Belleville, Illinois, June 8, 1846, says—At about half past 2, P. M. a heavy hail storm was met by the tremendous storm of wind, rain and hail; the hail was not so severe here as it was a short distance east of this place.

Hogs and sheep were killed by the force of the hail. The roof of a house near where this passenger got out of the stage, had holes driven through, and the windows knocked in—sash, glass and all. I have not seen any one from the neighborhood, so as to ascertain what damage has really been done, or what extent of ground was covered by the storm.

A Noble Dog.

A Baltimore correspondent of the North American, says: The noble deeds of one who took part in the late triumphant battles with the Mexicans, have not yet been recorded—that one was lieutenant Randolph Ridgely's faithful dog, a beautiful pointer, which he took with him from this city.

The Devil in the Market House.

We have heard of Doctor Faustus, and of other gentlemen, who have by some means or other acquired the reputation of having an intimate acquaintance with "the gentleman in black," but after the performances which took place in the Pittsburgh Market on Friday and Tuesday evenings last, we came to the conclusion that the "Fakir of Ava" was a touch ahead of both the "Devil and Doctor Faustus."

On Friday evening, we visited the Market to lay in, as usual, our stock of "provender," as Dugald Dalgetty says. While looking around at the piles of good things with which our friends from the country delight to supply us smoke-dried citizens, provided we have the ready cash to pay them, our attention was excited by an unusual movement to and from a particular point.

The poultry woman turned up her eyes, clasped her hands over her head, and ejaculating "Holy Mother!" bolted up Diamond alley as if the gentleman with the cloven foot was after her, never stopping to look behind until she was fairly in Wood street.

SCANDALOUS.

For good or for evil, For better or worse, Man gets him a wife Or buys him a horse. Both are deceptive, We take them on trust—The likeliest looking Oft turns out the worst.

How TAKE.—A very eminent writer has said, that although we seem grieved at the shortness of life in general, we are wishing every period of it at an end. The minor longs to be of age; then to be a man of business; then to make up an estate; then to arrive at honor; then to retire. The user would be very well satisfied to have all the time annihilated, that lies between the present moment and the next quarter-day; the politician would be content to lose three years of his life, could he place things in the posture which he fancies they will occupy after such a revolution of time; and the lover would be glad to strike out of his existence all the moments that are to pass away before the next meeting.
