SORROW'S HOLIDAY.

BY MRS. FRANCES S. OSGOOD.

Gay girls are wreathing
Flowers in their hair,
Fond lips are breathing
The wish—the prayer.
Lonely—the laughter,
The revel I shun;
One stealth after—
How welcome that one.
Far away gleaming,
The dancers flit by:
Here sit we dreaming—
Memory and I.
Fair beads of amber,
She counteth the while,
In the still chamber,
With sigh and smile.
And as the telieth
Her rosary o'er,
Wild my heart dwelleth,
On hours of yore.
Some winged treasure,
That flew from my arms,
Some perished pleasure
Each bead embalms.
All hopes I cherished,
There find a tomb,
One by one perished,
In glory and bloom.
Sound harp and viol!
Spread the bright hours!
Life's sunny dial,
They count by flowers.
They—the light-hearted!
Ah! dearer to me,
One dream of the parted,
Than all their wild glee.
Still the past haunts me!
'Mid all hope can say,
Memory chants me
A lovelier lay.

A MELTING STORY.

One wintry evening a country store-keeper in the Green Mountain State was about closing his doors for the night, and while standing in the snow out side putting up his window-shutters, he saw through the glass a lounging, worthless fellow within, grab a pound of fresh butter from the shelf and conceal it in his hat. The act was no sooner detected than the revenge was hit upon, and a very few minutes found the Green Mountain store-keeper at once indulging his appetite for fun to the fullest extent, and paying off the thief with a ferocious sort of torture, for which he might have gained a premium from the old inquisition. "I say, Seth!" said the store-keeper, coming in and closing the door after him, slapping his hands over his shoulders and stamping the snow off his feet. Seth had his hand on the door, his hat upon his head, and the roll of butter in his hat, and anxious to make his exit as soon as possible. "I say, Seth, sit down; I reckon, on such an e-ter-nal night as this, a leetle somethin' wouldn't hurt a fellow." Seth felt very uncertain; he had the butter, and was exceedingly anxious to be off, but the temptation of something warm sadly interfered with his resolution to go. This hesitation, however, was soon settled by the right owner of the butter taking Seth by the shoulders and planting him in a seat close to the stove, where he was in such a manner cornered in by the barrels and boxes, that while the grocer set before him there was no possibility of getting out, and right in this very place sure enough the storekeeper sat down. "Seth, we'll have a little warm Santa Cruz," said the Green Mountain grocer; so he opened the stove-door, and stuffed in as many sticks as the space would admit; "without it you'd freeze such a night as this." Seth already felt the butter settling down closer to his hair, and jumped up declaring he must go. "Not till you have had something warm, Seth, come, I've got a story to tell you too, sit down now;" and Seth was again pushed in his seat by his cunning tormentor. "Oh! it's too darned hot here," said the petty thief attempting to rise. "Set down—don't be in such a plaguy hurry," retorted the grocer, pushing him back in his chair. "But I've got the cows to fodder, and some wood to split, and I must be goin'," said the persecuted chap. "But you musn't tear yourself away, Seth, in this manner. Sit down; let the cows take care of themselves, and keep yourself cool; you appear to be fidgetty," said the roguish grocer with a wicked leer. The next thing was the production of two smoking glasses of hot rum toddy, the very sight of which, in Seth's present situation, would have made the hair stand erect upon his head, had it not been well oiled and kept down by the butter. "Seth, I'll give you a toast now, and you can butter it yourself," said the grocer with an air of such consummate simplicity that poor Seth still believed himself unsuspected. "Seth, here's—here's a Christmas goose well roasted and basted, eh? I tell you, it's the greatest eating in creation. And Seth, don't you never use hog's fat or common cooking butter to baste with—come, take your butter—I mean, Seth, take your toddy."

Poor Seth now began to smoke as well as melt, and his mouth was hermetically sealed up as though he had been born dumb. Streak after streak of the butter came pouring from under his hat and his handkerchief was already soaked with the greasy overflow. Talking away, as if nothing was the matter, the grocer kept stuffing the wood into the stove while poor Seth sat bolt upright with his back against the counter and his knees almost touching the red hot furnace before. "Plugged cold night this," said the grocer. "Hy, Seth, you seem to persevere as if you were warm! Why don't you take your hat off! Here let me put your hat away!" "No!" exclaimed poor Seth with a spasmodic effort to get his tongue loose, clapping both his hands upon his hat—"No, I must go; let me out; I ain't well; let me go!" A greasy cataract was now pouring down the poor fellow's face and neck and soaking into his clothes, and trickling down his body into his very boots, so that he was literally in a perfect bath of oil. "Well, good night, Seth," said the harmonious Vermont "if you will go!" and adding as he left, "neighbor, I reckon on the fun I've had out of you is worth nine pence, so I shant charge you with that pound of butter!"

A NEW ITEM IN A BILL.

Some forty years ago, while Jerome Bonaparte was travelling through New England, with a large suite, he stopped over night at the tavern of an avaricious old fellow in one of the beautiful villages in western Massachusetts. The landlord was an Englishman born, ultra-tory in his feelings; and when he heard in the morning, that he was to have no less a person than a brother of the great Napoleon, with an extensive retinue, for his guests at night, his joy knew no bounds. Extra servants were employed in all the rooms, clean sheets were put upon the beds, chickens and turkeys were run down, and had their necks rung—in short, every preparation was made to give the prince a reception becoming his high rank.

Night finally came, and with it came Jerome Bonaparte, with some twenty friends and servants. Here was a wind-fall for the old tavern-keeper—here was business for him. Supper was soon served; the distinguished guests went to bed at an early hour; next morning breakfast was prepared, swallowed, and soon after everything was arranged for their departure. There was one very important duty still to be performed by the tavern-keeper—the making out the bill. Such customers were scarce—Bonaparte seldom visited that section of the country—and Boniface was determined to make the most of the present visit. He got along remarkably well with the bill until he had run up to $75. This was not enough. The landlord could not think of letting the brother of the greatest man of the age off short of $100. He "figured" it over again, added a little here, and put another "extra" there, but it only amounted to $80. "The bill!—the bill!" was shouted in his ears, but the bill was "not right" as he viewed it. All was bustle and confusion. The French servants were chattering and bustling about—the carriages were ready to start, and nothing was wanting but the bill.

"Why for you no make de bill?" asked the cashier of the party. "In one minute," replied the landlord, scratching his head. "By gar, you make him quick, or me no pay," continued the Frenchman. "Yes, yes, I hear you," said the landlord, his eye glancing from one charge to another.

Suddenly a thought struck him. Amid the unwonted clatter, jabber and din about his ears, he reflected that he should turn all the extra noise and confusion the visit had occasioned, to some account. The "item" he had so long sought to conjure up was at length found, and he immediately finished the bill with—

"To making a d—d fuss generally, $20." The paymaster glanced at the amount—paid the bill, and was off instanter—Whether Jerome Bonaparte ever found out that he had paid $20 for making a d—d fuss generally about a Yankee tavern-keeper's house, is more than we can say, but if ever Basil Hall, Fiddler, or Mrs. Trollope should get hold of this story, they may rely upon its authenticity.

A PREDICAMENT.

How queerly does a lady feel,
A walking in the street,
When she's aware her stocking heel,
Makes visible her feet.
She lifts her foot up awkwardly,
And puts it down again;
And tries to pass that none may see,
But labor's all in vain.

CHARACTERISTIC.

Noisy geese destroy all peace,
When cackling loud and often;
And so girls do, when more than two
About their beaux are talking.
"Look on me and weep," as the onion said to the cook.

Messrs. Robinson, Collins & Co.—Sirs: This is to inform you that I was afflicted for 20 years with a violent pain in my breast, so much so that I could hardly lay in bed at night. Cough attended, followed by emaciation and other decided symptoms of consumption. I applied to several eminent physicians, and took a great deal of medicine without any relief whatever. I was advised to try Dr. Davis's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar, of which I took two bottles, which entirely relieved me of my complaint; therefore I can with confidence recommend it to all who are in a like manner afflicted, as a most valuable medicine.

Diseases of the Lungs, &c.

MORE EVIDENCE OF ITS SURPASSING HEALTH RESTORATIVE VIRTUES!

SPRINGFIELD, Ky., May 14, 1845. Messrs. Sanford & Park—Gents:—I take this opportunity of informing you of a most remarkable cure performed upon me by the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

In the year of 1840, I was taken with an inflammation of the bowels, which I labored under for six weeks, when I gradually recovered. In the fall of 1841, I was attacked with a severe cold, which seated on my lungs; and for the space of three years I was confined to my bed. I tried all kinds of medicines, and every variety of medical aid, without benefit; and thus I wedged along until the winter of 1844, when I heard of "Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry."

My friends persuaded me to give it a trial, though I had given up all hopes of recovery, and had prepared myself for the change of another world. Through their solicitations I was induced to make use of the genuine Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. The effect was truly astonishing. After five years' affliction, pain and suffering, and after having spent four or five hundred dollars to no purpose, and the best and most respectable physicians had proved unavailing, I was soon restored to entire health by the blessing of God and the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

I am now enjoying good health, and such is my altered appearance that I am no longer known when I meet my old acquaintances.

I have gained rapidly in weight, and my flesh is firm and solid. I can now eat as much as any person, and my food seems to agree with me. I have eaten more during the last six months than I had eaten in five years before.

Considering my cure almost a miracle, I deem it necessary for the good of the afflicted, and a duty I owe to the proprietors and my fellow men (who should know where relief may be had) to make the statement public.

May the blessings of God rest upon the proprietors of so valuable a medicine as Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. Yours respectfully,
WM. H. BAKER.

All orders for Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry should be addressed to Sanford & Park, corner of Fourth and Walnut streets, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Price $1 per bottle. AGENTS—Read & Son, Huntingdon; Gemmill & Porter, Alexandria; Spencer & Flood, Williamsburg; Mrs. Mary Orr, Hollidaysburg. [m3]

CONSUMPTION CURABLE.

Thompson's Compound Syrup of Tar and Wood Naphtha.

INFLAMMATION of the mucous membrane is the result of some impression made upon them by cold or other causes; hence Croup, Cough, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, resulting in Consumption, Gastritis, diseased Liver and Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart, &c. From incontestable evidence, it is proved that Thompson's Compound Syrup of Tar and Wood Naphtha is a specific in these complaints—alleviating irritation, promoting healthy secretions, and removing the existing cause of disease. Thousands have used it, and can bear testimony to its efficacy.

FARTHER PROOF!!

Philadelphia, March 1st, 1846.—I hereby certify, that in consequence of repeated and neglected colds, my lungs became seriously affected, and for a long time I have suffered with violent pain in the breast, obstinate cough and difficult expectoration, the symptoms daily increasing in violence. I had recourse to various remedies, with no avail, until I used

THOMPSON'S COMPOUND SYRUP OF TAR, which effected a permanent cure before I had taken three bottles. E
