

BIRMINGHAM, July 7, 1847.

MR. EDITOR:—If we had no other means of ascertaining, than the annual visits of those who call upon us to let us know that they are willing to receive a nomination for some office on the different tickets, we in the country would know that the time is coming; and it has often suggested itself to my mind, whether it was not the duty of the conductors of public Journals, to speak, and to speak freely upon the subject of our primary Elections. I have some times thought I would try my hand at writing in regard to it myself, if no one else did, but some how I never could get myself up to the work. It has now occurred to me, whether, I might not accomplish what I desired if I suggested the matter to you, and asked your views.

In order that you may understand, what I want, and what I believe deserving of some strictures, I will give you a limit of my own notions, trusting that you will carry out the subject more at length.

To me it seems a great error, in honest, faithful, and well meaning partisans, when they desire a nomination for some office, to set about, either by fair means or foul, to get delegates elected pledged to secure their nomination; and I will tell you the reason why I think so. It engenders a personal strife, which separates warm party friends. It begets and fosters factions which win the participants away from the great question at stake—the general good. It makes all the other parts of a ticket of secondary importance, while the single and most desired office, is the main object. It makes the Convention of Delegates, not a body, consulting what shall best secure the honor, welfare and success of the party, and its cardinal principles, and thus give beauty and strength to our organization, but a meeting of one man's or a set of men's friends, who are to consult how they can best patch up a ticket which will be strong enough to carry their load; or which in other circumstances shall prove a load for their friends as well as the party.

Will you oblige your readers, by giving the above a place in your valuable paper, and making it the subject of your own reflections for your readers, and oblige
A PRACTICAL WHIG.

EDUCATIONAL.

MR. CLARK:—Amid the very imperfect condition, of most of our schools for elementary instruction—a really good primary school may be fitly compared to a garden in the wilderness or an oasis in the desert. Such a school, under the care of Mr. R. A. MILLER of Huntingdon, I had the pleasure of hearing examined on Saturday the 11th instant. The exercises, though not protracted nor extended to a great number of subjects, were delightfully varied and proved highly interesting to the numerous and intelligent auditory.

The classes in Orthography and Reading spoke with proper deliberation and unusual distinctness; while the responses of the more advanced classes, were exceedingly prompt and invariably accurate. Being unused to write, I will not attempt a particular description of the various exercises. They were all fully equal to any thing of the kind I had ever witnessed either in town or country, at home or abroad, and reflected much credit on the pupils, their teacher and their friends. But Class No. 4 in Geography, a study recently introduced into the school, merits and must receive a more special notice. This class was rapidly questioned on the definitions and general outlines, as well as many of the minutia of the subject, for at least three quarters of an hour, not by their teacher only, but by others—and did not mis-answer a single question or hesitate for a reply! This may appear incredible to those not present, especially when I add, that this astonishing proficiency is the result of scarcely eight weeks study, and that too by young children, some of whom had not, perhaps, before ever looked into a Geography. Doubt it who may, I aver it to be true, and that without the least coloring or exaggeration, as the many surprised and delighted spectators can abundantly testify.

But the recitations, good as they were, are not the only, nor, indeed, the principal excellence of this admirable little school. Far from it. The lively interest, fixed attention, exact order, and perfect self-control of the pupils—these constitute its chief merit, distinguish it from the multitude of schools in the country, and make it a model worthy of all imitation.

These characteristics of the school, reflect, too, the most deserved credit on the teacher, indicate the cause of his early promise, and will, if I mistake not, ensure his future success. They show conclusively that though young in years, he has stored his mind with the thoughts of maturity; that he has escaped from the prevailing, but mistaken and degrading notion, that the Teacher is a mere instructor, whose duty is confined to the paltry business of asking questions, hearing tasks, and solving problems; and imbued correct views of his responsibilities and the qualifications necessary to meet these responsibilities, with ease and pleasure to himself and benefit to his pupils. While he keeps in sight of these great, cardinal principles, and entertains and cherishes these enlarged and ennobling views, he may confidently hope to be a blessing to the community, for which he labors—an ornament to the profession in which he has already taken a respectable stand.

OUR NEXT SENATOR.

MR. EDITOR:—As the time for putting in nomination a candidate to represent the Senatorial District composed of the counties of Huntingdon, Bedford and Blair is drawing nigh, it may not be amiss to solicit a PUBLIC interchange of opinion on the subject. It is one in which the people are deeply interested, and they ought to be fully and fairly represented. No one can doubt that the candidate ought to be selected from among the citizens of Blair County.

Bedford, as far back as my recollection runs, has been represented in the State Senate by Piper, Fore, Barelay and Mullin, fifteen out of the last eighteen years. For several years she has been represented in Congress by a Burd as well as a Mann. She has had an Auditor General, a State Treasurer, two Adjutant Generals, and many other high honors conferred on her. She may be considered ambitious, but that is no fault. She is, no doubt, modest and unassuming.

Huntingdon has been represented during the last three years by the Hon. John Morrison—a man who faithfully and diligently attended to her interests as well as to those of Bedford. I understand that she does not now put in her claim. She is truly very modest and retiring. She has been content to do the voting during the last twenty years. In 1836 she elected Maclay of Millin and Merrill of Union to the Constitutional Convention. In 1838 she modestly received a candidate to fill the vacancy in the Senate of two years, for which she elected Maclay of Union to the same place for a full term. In the same year she rolled up a thousand Whig majority to elect a candidate from Centre county to Congress, and he was defeated by 150 votes. It was then evident that she must do better or suffer the opposition to triumph. In 1840, she increased her majority so as to elect the same candidate to congress and Mathers of Juniata to the Senate. In 1842 she again polled a large majority to re-elect the same man (Gen. Irvin) to Congress. In 1844 she elected Blanchard, and in 1846 in connexion with Blair, she re-elected him with an increased majority, although many Whigs voted for Wilson on account of his locality. All the other counties in the district giving majorities against the Whigs. Every one will concede to Huntingdon and Blair the high honor of doing the voting for the Whigs. This is all well enough so long as it may last, whether from an honest devotion to servileness or from other motives. When such things may cease to be is it not reasonable to expect former results?

Blair eduity, although yet in her youth, has her rights and her interests to attend to. She needs much nurturing although a promising child.—She refuses to cry although she may sigh deeply. Great pains have been taken and many sacrifices made by the different nurses, but fears are entertained that she may set up for herself long ere she arrives at the full age of maturity. If she should do so who could complain?—Who in justice and honesty could say she did wrong? Who, let me ask you? A CITIZEN.

MARRIED.

In this borough, on the 8th inst., by David Snare, Esq., Mr. JAMES D. WOOD of Barree Forge, to Miss ELIZA E. BORNST of West township.
In this borough, on the 2d inst., by the same, Mr. SAMUEL LYON to Miss MARGARET HAMILTON, both of Millin county.

DIED.

In West township on the 3d ultimo, Mrs. PATIENCE MAGUIRE, consort of Mr. Michael Maguire, in the 75th year of her age.
The deceased was among the earliest settlers of this Country, and with her husband braved all the hardships and privations incident to the life of a pioneer. She possessed great energy of character—a clear and discriminating mind. No wayfarer ever called at her door and was turned away hungry; naked and not clad. In her death society has lost a worthy member. She was a kind and affectionate wife and mother—and many will mourn her loss.

In this borough, on the 8th inst., Mrs. SUSAN MILES STEWART, consort of Mr. J. G. Stewart, in the 35th year of her age.

DELEGATE MEETINGS

COUNTY CONVENTION.

THE Democratic Whigs of the several Townships will hold meetings, at the usual places, on Saturday, August 8th, 1847, for the purpose of electing two delegates to represent their several townships in County Convention, to be held in Huntingdon on Wednesday, the 11th day of August, 1847, to place in nomination a Ticket, to be supported at the coming election.

The Committee would urge upon the friends of truth and order, the importance of attending the primary meetings. All who love their party, its principles, its organization, and desire its success—and believe it the safeguard of our Laws and privileges, should be early in the field, and faithful and untiring in his endeavors to secure success. Neglect of a first duty will bring coldness and carelessness, in the performance of subsequent ones. Old Huntingdon has arrayed herself already among the faithful.—She must maintain her post of honor.
