

A TRIP TO THE CAVE.

[For the Huntingdon Journal.]
 "The chial 's amang ye lakun' notes,
 And faith he 'll print 'em."

Now it came to pass in the eighth month and fifth day of the month, in the reign of one Daniel, famed for wisdom, (who was Judge over a certain tribe of Juniatites, renowned for its sweet indolence and for the inhabitants having entirely subdued that carnal spirit called Public Spirit,) that certain young men of the tribe, numbering from the least unto the greatest, nine souls as we suppose, sought out some new invention to spend a day in the pleasuring of their minds. And having been numbered according to their polls (the asses and chariots being excepted,) there were found to be the magical number three, thrice told; and the names thereof were after this fashion. There was Snack of the family of Neffelites, and Kit of the family of the Esnaraites, one surnamed Patrick of the Penquinites, and Rad, called Dobby, a descendant of Jonathan—Dumodum (which is Doctor) of the Amreadites, and Joho a servant of the scribes; Jacobus, a crafty artificer in gold and silver, a disciple of a certain Gebuoyite, and Ram the Pedegogue, and Hawst the enemy of the Jassackites, and once the distant follower of the Slassackites. These being all told and well equipped, sallied forth soon after Aurora, rosy fingered daughter of the Morn, had opened the orient gates and poured in such a flood of blushing beams and smiles, that Neptune and all the minor water deities rent their misty robes and gossamer veils of fog, dissolved them all in light, and welcomed and returned the smiles and beams. The young men of valor went in the pride of their hearts on their asses and chariots. They turned neither to the right hand or the left, but as their noses directed they followed straight on; excepting only some of the horsemen thereof, who in ardor and perhaps ignorance were carried away on their beasts into a by and forbidden way, which, if they had gone far enough would have brought them, involved by a square, into gins, and pits, and traps, whence no traveller returns. At this moment the other more discreet and wary part of the company came up and brought back the feet of the wanderers into the sure way of pleasantness and peace. And being now about a Sabbath day's journey from their own sweet native walled town they were an hungered, for it was nigh unto the time of the noon-day meal. They were also in an enemy's country, and it behooved them to draw near with caution to the threshing-floor of one Peter Poole. But these valiant youths were answered roughly, and turned away with the coldest s(n)ack imaginable, like as were David's company of young men by the churl Nabal when they were an hungered. But alas, for the youth of the tribe of the Juniatites! there was no favoring Abagail for them. Even the virgins of the Philistine scowled upon the famished company. Now, verily, were their visages lengthened. But they once more girded up their loins and hastened forward until soon they lifted up their eyes and beheld afar off, as it were the garners and storehouse of one of the Isettites, who was well affected to the tribe of Juniatites. Then that one of the young men, surnamed Patrick, of the Penquinites, rode forward like Jehu of old, and addressed the Patriarch of the family of Isettites, saying, as he lifted up his voice, "Oh, thou man of reverence and age, don't you know my father?" And being moved to tears he arose and answered, "And who are you, my lad?" Then a good treaty of peace was entered into after much more consultation of the same sort. By this time the remnant did arrive, and having gathered themselves together, partook of something to eat and something to drink, and where-withall to be fed; all which they had obtained for the sum of thirty pieces of copper, accurately weighed out according to a just balance. Being refreshed in the inner man, and the beasts being tethered and in a manner provided for, they went for to go on foot. Now the road was not grievous as to distance, and was of such nature that it was not meet to go on their asses and chariots. Having gone about a furlong they arrived at one of the famous springs of that country. This is called Arch Spring, and is in measure about 25 cubits in diameter, more or less, and seventy-five in circumference. The depth thereof is not known; but shrewd fellows of the baser sort would deceive the tribes of the land, and say there is a tradition of the Patriarchs that there is no bottom to the Spring. But this the young men of Juniatites would not believe in as much as in their wisdom they could not see on what the water rested and settled down upon if it had no bottom! Now, over this spring there layeth a huge, vast rock, having a beautiful arch worn in the under side thereof. And this arch has the appearance of an arc of ninety degrees formed by the revolution of the radius equal to five cubits and a half cubit in length. Altogether, it seemeth for the eye to look upon as a natural bridge thrown over the spring. Having gazed to their heart's content, they took themselves up and walked about the space of the ninth part of a league, and soon stood before the black yawning mouth of the far famed Cave, which has been heard tell of from Dan to Beersheba. Into this Cave a strong stream of water flows with great velocity, and after proceeding some distance sinks under the mountain, and then rises again and forms the Arch-Spring which we have mentioned, where it boils up most violently, sometimes like the seething pot, and thence runs down a good slope to turn the mill of the said Isettite. Now, it so happened that in days gone by, a descendant of the Gomorroitites was not at peace with the family of Isettites; so he cast in his mind how he might vex his enemy, and give vent to that exceeding lofty disposition of soul, called jealousy. Then he went to work and built an exceeding great dam over against the Cave's mouth, if happily the water might be held back from the mill; and perchance on Sabbath let out the water to overflow the enemy's country, unawares. But the waters found a new course through the mountain and finally got back into its old channel, and thus was the Gomorroitite discomfited in mind. After looking around about upon all these things, the young men extinguished their thirst, lit up their flambeaux (which the fathers and mothers of the tribe had learned how to make when one surnamed Caudlester was Judge,) and going into, as it were, the very jaws of the valley of the Shadow of Death, they made the darkness which could be felt, very visible. And as they stood round about within the entrance, Jacobus the disciple of the Gebuoyite, went up to a lofty position in the side of the Cave near unto the entrance. Then raising aloft his light, he bent himself three times three, and upon a large flat stone, as if it had been the altar of the Demons of the Den, he placed a rich offering the savor of which filled the Cave's Mouth and delighted the nostrils of the by-standers. Then much encouraged they travelled on over rocks and through the river Sticks, (for there was much wood, and brush, and logs in that stream,) without any mishap, except that Hawst, the contemner of the Slassackites, was in much trouble and confusion of mind for the covering of his head. Thus they travelled on about 150 cubits when they came into a wide space called Solomon's Temple. About thirty cubits the high thereof and twenty the breadth thereof, thereabouts more or under, and the length thereof was greater than the high or breadth thereof. On one side of this apartment standeth a natural pulpit, with graceful festoons and hangings of drapery of stalactite, above and around about. All which no doubt would have shone with great splendour, but they had a muddy appearance and could not. Having meditated upon these wonders and others such like, namely, Hercules's Pillars, the Pools of Solomon, Job's Coffin, part of "the Elephant," &c., they pressed on through Pensico Avenue, and finally crawling around the Lover's Leap, came suddenly against the Bottomless Pit. Here the waters sink at the great distance of three hundred cubits from the external world. From reasons of much weight none of the tribes have ever been known to venture further than this Pit. Then the goodly band return to the Cave's mouth, where daylight shone in as resplendent as if the full orb of sun had burst at once upon the realms of darkness. The Bear's Blue Hole, with cliffs around of an enormous high, was also visited; for it lay only at about the distance of two furlongs from the Cave. Then the company of goodly souls, as we suppose, returned upon their beasts of burden and carriages to a certain village called Street, also surnamed Water—from the extreme neatness and beautifulness of the paths and highways, as well also the wondrous water works of art and nature!—and here the cry of, eggs! and famine! went up through the land, which even reached unto the ears of some of the damsels of the young men's tribe. And after much wit and humor passing between Dumodum and Dobby, they drew nigh home. And the damsels came forth to meet the young men and welcome them once more within the borders of the tribe. And some of the damsels looked through the latices of their souls as much as to say—"My pigeon, my fair one, my love, why away to the valley without us! Why leave us to mourn your absence in sack cloth and ashes?" But at length they were all comforted, and the old men and mothers of the tribe rejoiced and were made glad when the company of goodly young men (as we suppose) had returned.

Valuable Ore-Bank & Water-Power For Sale.

THE subscriber wishes to dispose of about 300 acres of very rich Ore and Coal Lands situate on the waters of Sandy Creek, in Perry township, Jefferson county, Penna.

The property is situate on three branches of Sandy Creek, which unite upon the premises, affording abundant power for several Furnaces, Forges, Rolling Mills, &c., all within about one fourth of a mile of the Ore bank. The Ore is of the same kind, but of a richer quality, that is used at the Great Western works in Armstrong county.

The Creek is now navigable, for Arks, &c., in time of high water, from within seven miles of the property, and could, with little expense, be made so from the premises. There is a Saw-Mill in operation on the premises. The land is all well timbered, and well imbered lands may be purchased in the immediate neighborhood at from one to two dollars per acre.

This property undoubtedly affords facilities for the manufacture of Iron, possessed by few situations in Pennsylvania, and to an enterprising capitalist acquainted with the business is a location much to be desired.

As this advertisement is merely intended to draw the attention of those acquainted with the iron business to the lands, the subscriber deems it unnecessary to dwell longer on the advantages possessed by this property, as those wishing to purchase will of course call and examine. Those desirous of further particulars are invited to call on the subscriber living on the premises, or on Mr. Gaskell, Agent of the Holland Land Company, at Punxsutawney, Jefferson county.

Important to Stove Dealers.

The attention of Stove Dealers in this place is invited to our assortment of Cooking, Parlor, Hall and office Stoves, and especially to Atwood's Empire Hot Air Cooking Stove.

As the best cooking apparatus ever invented, it having obtained a celebrity, wherever it has been introduced, never before attained by any Cooking Stove. The operation of baking being performed in this stove by hot Air, instead of heat radiated from the oven plates, renders it equal for baking to a Brick Oven, or to the Tin oven for roasting; making it unnecessary to turn or change the article while cooking, and removing all liability to burn. We are desirous to have the Stove introduced in this market, and to that end, liberal terms will be given to a responsible dealer, willing to take hold of them, and only one will be permitted to sell them in the place.

Dr. Keeler's Vegetable Panacea.

For the removal and permanent cure of all diseases arising from an impure state of the Blood and habit of the body, viz: Chronic affections of the Chest, Pleurisy, Bronchitis, Catarrh, &c.—Scrofula in all its stages, Tetter, Scald-head, Cutaneous affections of the body, face and extremities, Chronic Rheumatism, Chronic enlargements of the ligaments and joints, White Swellings, Syphilitic Affections, Constitutional disorders arising from debility, Mercurial and hereditary dispositions, &c.

It is now admitted by Pathologists, that no original temperament, complexion, constitution, or form of body, confers complete immunity from Hereditary diseases; that scrofula, consumption and other affections having a similarity of origin occur in all: although observation convinces us, that individuals and families, possessing certain characteristics are more frequently the subject of these maladies than others. These diseases are a morbid condition of the whole system of nutrition—these produce being but the effects of an alteration of the Blood and Secretions—the ulcers, abscesses, enlarged glands, inflammations, &c. being merely attendant phenomena. The cause exists prior to the phenomena, and must be destroyed before perfect health can be established. This may be done by Dr. Keeler's Vegetable Panacea, the most certain remedy for all diseases arising from an impure state of the blood and system of nutrition, ever presented to the notice of the afflicted.

Prepared corner of 3d and South streets, Philadelphia: and sold by John N. Prowell, and Jones & Simonton, Huntingdon, and by Druggists and Merchants throughout the county. Price—$1 per bottle, large size. June 9, 1847.

MITCHELL, Perry co., Pa., Oct. 1, 1846.

Messrs. Robinson, Collins & Co.—Sirs: This is to inform you that I was afflicted for 20 years with a violent pain in my breast, so much so that I could hardly lay in bed at night. Cough attended, followed by emaciation and other decided symptoms of consumption. I applied to several eminent physicians, and took a great deal of medicine without any relief whatever. I was advised to try Dr. Davis's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar, of which I took two bottles, which entirely relieved me of my complaint; therefore I can with confidence recommend it to all who are in a like manner afflicted, as a most valuable medicine.

JOHN TOOMEY.

The authenticity of the above statement is vouched for by Mr. Isaac Murphy, a merchant of Milford, who knows Mr. Toomey, and the circumstances of his case. Mr. T. is now sixty years of age.
