THE CARNIVAL AT ROME.

ROME, 1847.
But I proceed to unfold to you some of the things which have been occurring in this city of olden times, which is the place of our daily abode, and which, therefore, I am half the time almost forgetting is Rome. So common do the greatest things become to us by custom and familiarity. I wish I had kept a regular journal of every thing interesting here, but the use of the brush has made the pen retire somewhat from service. I will, however, commence just where we are now, and perhaps here and there give you a rapid sketch. We are in the midst, or rather verging towards the close of the Carnivals. I don't think it is easy for a sober American to conceive of it as it is. Just imagine the whole population suddenly turned into a great stage company, every one trying to outdo his neighbor in extravagance and gaiety. Masques, buffoons, men and women, in costumes and disguises of all sorts,—men dressed as women, and women as men, some with green noses, a yard long, powdered and curled.

"Black spirits and white, blue spirits and grey, Mingle, mingle, mingle, you that mingle may."

Gay young men, and beautiful women, in carriages, and on foot, and at windows and balconies, flinging about a perfect hail storm of confetti, bonbons and bouquets,—all crowding their tide of mad frolic into one narrow street, with side-walks no more than a foot wide, or so. Windows and balconies all decorated with crimson and gold hangings,—men and boys selling thousands of baskets of flowers, the ragged boys picking up those that are thrown away, and selling them over again. All a perfect rush, and noisy helter skelter bedlam,—and this kept up for eight or ten days, with few intermissions,—commencing at 1 P. M., and ending with a horse race, without riders, at sundown. And then the beautiful women in and under the balconies and windows. I have never seen so much beauty anywhere as in Rome; and it is as common in the humblest women walking bare headed in the street, as in the high born and wealthy, riding in their carriages. The first two days of the Carnival, I went on foot, with my basket of bouquets, exchanging them here and there, along the street, with the fair ones met. Then I looked on one day as a spectator; then yesterday I went again with the crowd. It is impossible to be on the Corso, without taking a part in the festivities. But the greatest time I have had in the way of frolic, was the other night, when I went with a party of friends to a masquerade party, at the American Consul's, Mr. Brown. I went in a black domino and mask, disguising my voice, as they all do in masks, and for a long time puzzling even my friends. I assumed three voices in the course of the evening. There were several other dominos, and some splendid costumes, but most of the company were not masked. At one o'clock we went from there to the public festina, at the Apollo theatre, where we staid till after 4 o'clock in the morning. The pit of this large theatre was entirely floored over, and the whole space was crammed with people, either in masks, costumes, or plain dress, and the boxes filled with spectators. There was music and waltzing in a small space left by the crowd. But the fun was confined to the maskers, who devoted themselves to puzzling all the English and Americans they met without masks. Sometimes we would go to the boxes and talk to the ladies, to whom whether friends or strangers, we of course tell lies of all sorts. Universal liberty is allowed, but never have I seen the least violation of any decorum. The Italians are never rude, and contrast strongly with the English, who set all refinements at defiance. On the Corso, during the Carnival, they always distinguish themselves by their fierceness in throwing confetti, and in the quantity thrown. Whole plates and basketsful are sometimes thrown at a time, and quite indiscriminately at friends and foes,—and sometimes oranges which are forbidden. Lord Ward, an enormously rich Englishman, it is said, received a black eye the other day, in a broil occasioned by a violation of the customary ways of conducting the sport. Everywhere it seems as if the English were the most overbearing and insolent of all nations, if I may judge of some of the specimens I have seen abroad. At the festinas, as well as at the Corso, during the Carnival, all sorts of extravagant disguises are assumed. One fellow, with a scarlet coat, and footman's breeches and boots, and a head and queue about five times the size of life, stood bowing silently and respectfully at the door. Another silent chap perambulated the room with a head the size of a Yankee pumpkin. Some were with dog's heads, and some with monkey heads, and some like great parrots. A friend of mine I carried around, introducing him as the great baboon of the west. It is almost impossible for one to recognize another, if he is only careful in disguising his voice.

But there are two more days yet of the Carnival to come. But the great day was last Thursday, which they call Grovel grasso, or Fat Thursday. It was fat, I assure you, even to grassiness. The crowd was too intense in the streets for much enjoyment, and as much as one could do to avoid the carriages, for there are no side walks wide enough to walk on. * * * * * The Carnival is over at last, and I am sorry, for there was "something too much of this." The last day was particularly lively. Nothing could exceed the multitude and variety of masks and costumes. The day was closed with the Mocoletti, when the whole Corso presented one blaze of light. People in carriages carried, people on foot tried to put them out,—and lights hung out of windows, and poked out by long poles from other windows. Every one either carried a light, or tried to blow out others, and during the whole there was one long peal, without ceasing, of "Senza Mocoletti! Senza Mocoletti-o-o-o!" But in an hour, all was silent and deserted, and the people were commencing to pull down the stagings and seats on the sidewalks. There are a great many Americans in Rome at present.

The other day I visited the Castle of St. Angelo, a tremendous fortress—once the Mausoleum of the Emperor Adrian. Three hundred years ago it was used for a prison. We went in with torches, into the very cells in which Beatrice Cenci and his mother were confined,—and also Benvenuto and Cellini, and saw the walls over which he escaped.

C. P. C.

An Editor not a Gentleman.
Macracon of the Dayton Transcript, tells the following good one as a spark of his experience:

We have travelled some 1500 miles within the last few days by land and water. The tavern keepers, steamboat Captains, &c. &c., have uniformly chided our hat and indignantly refused to permit us to pay our way. In short, upon the raging canal, upon the expansive lake, in the packets, hotels, and floating palaces of Lake Erie, we have had a "free blow" and been uniformly regarded among the "dead heads." This you will regard as a very pleasant, and certainly a very agreeable and advantageous way of travelling. But there was one "free blow," we received which came near knocking us into the middle of next week. The incident is so comical that we will relate it, if the joke is at our expense:

While on board of one of the splendid steamers which ply between Buffalo and Chicago, the fuz on our chin grew rather longer than was agreeable, and we repaired to the barber-shop on board to have it taken off. The fellow did it up in first rate style. After he had combed and oiled our head, brushed our clothes, and slicked us up fine, we felt gratified,—pulled out a dime, and proffered it to him as a reward for his services. He drew himself up with considerable pomposity—

"I understand," said he, "dat you is an Editor."

"Well! what of it?" said we.

"We never charge editors nothin'," said he.

"But my woolly friend," said we, "there are a good many editors travelling now days, and such liberality on your part will prove a ruinous business."

"Oh neber mind," said he, "we makes it all up off the gemmen."

We incontinently sloped.

THE MOTHER.

SCARCELY a day passes that we do not hear of the loveliness of a woman;—the affection of a sister, or the devotedness of a wife; and it is the remembrance of such things that cheers and comforts the dreariest hours of life,—yet, a mother's love far exceeds them in strength, in disinterestedness—and in purity. The child of her bosom may have forsaken and left her,—he may have disregarded all her instructions and warnings,—he may have become an outcast from society, and none may care for or notice him—yet his mother changes not, nor is her love weakened, and for him her prayers still ascend!

Sickness may weary other friends—misfortune drive away familiar countenances—and poverty leave none to lean upon; yet they affect not a mother's love, but only call into exercise in a still greater degree her tenderness and affection.

The mother has duties to perform which are weighty and responsible;—the lisping infant must be taught how to live—the thoughtless child must be instructed in Wisdom's ways—the tempted youth must be advised and warned—the dangers and difficulties of life must be pointed out, and lessons of virtue must be impressed on the mind. Her words, acts, faults, frailties, and temper, are all noticed by those that surround her, and impressions made in the nursery exert a more powerful influence in forming the character, than do any after instructions.

If passions are unrestrained—if truth is not adhered to—if consistency is not seen—if there be a want of affection or a murmuring at the dispensations of Providence; the youthful mind will receive the impression, and subsequent life will develop it; but if all is purity, sincerity, truth, contentment, and love, then will the result be a blessing, and many will rejoice in the example and influence of the pious Mother.

WOMEN.—Cobbett says—"Women, so amiable in themselves, are never so amiable as when they are useful; and, as for beauty, though men may fall in love with girls at play, there is nothing to make them stand to their love like seeing them at work."

THE subscriber wishes to dispose of about 300 acres of very rich Ore and Coal Lands situate on the waters of Sandy Creek, in Perry township, Jefferson county, Penn'a.

The property is situate on three branches of Sandy Creek, which unite upon the premises, affording abundant power for seven or eight Furnaces, Forges, Rolling-Mills, &c., all within about one fourth of a mile of the Ore bank. This property undoubtedly affords facilities for the manufacture of Iron, possessed by few situations in Pennsylvania, and to an enterprising capitalist acquainted with the business is a location much to be desired.

As this advertisement is merely intended to draw the attention of those acquainted with the iron business to the lands, the subscriber deems it unnecessary to dwell longer on the advantages possessed by this property, as those wishing to purchase will of course call and examine. Those desiring further particulars are invited to call on the subscriber at his residence, or on Mr. Gaskell, Secretary of the Holland Land Company, at Punxsutawney, Jefferson county.

Important to Stove Dealers.

The attention of Stove Dealers in this place is invited to our assortment of Cooking, Parlor, Hall and office Stoves, and especially to Atwood's Empire Hot Air Cooking Stove.

As the best cooking apparatus ever invented, it having obtained a celebrity, wherever it has been introduced, never before attained by any Cooking Stove. The operation of baking being performed in this stove by hot Air, instead of heat radiated from the oven plates, renders it equal for baking to a Brick Oven, or to the Tin oven for roasting; making it unnecessary to turn or change the article while cooking, and removing all liability to burn. We are desirous to have the Stove introduced in this market, and to that end, liberal terms will be given to a responsible dealer, willing to take hold of them, and only one will be permitted to sell them in the place.

Dr. Keeler's Vegetable Pains-accider.

For the removal and permanent cure of all diseases arising from an impure state of the Blood and habit of the body, viz: Chronic affections of the Chest, Pleurisy, Bronchitis, Catarrh, &c.—Scrofula in all its stages, Tetter, Scald-head, Cutaneous affections of the body, face and extremities, Chronic Rheumatism, Chronic enlargements of the Ligaments and Joints, White Swellings, Syphilitic Affections, Constitutional disorders arising from debility, Mercurial and hereditary predispositions, &c.

It is now admitted by Pathologists, that no original temperament, complexion, constitution, or form of body, confers complete immunity from Hereditary diseases; that scrofula, consumption and other affections having a similarity of origin occur in all; although observation convinces us, that individuals and families, possessing certain characteristics are more frequently the subject of these maladies than others. These diseases are a morbid condition of the whole system of nutrition—these products being but the effects of an alteration of the Blood and Secretions,—the ulcers, abscesses, enlarged glands, inflammations, &c. being merely attendant phenomena. The cause exists prior to the phenomena, and must be destroyed before perfect health can be established. This may be done by Dr. Keeler's Vegetable Pains-accider, the most certain remedy for all diseases arising from an impure state of the blood and system of nutrition, ever presented to the notice of the afflicted.

Prepared corner of 3d and South streets, Philadelphia; and sold by John N. Prowell, and Jones & Simonton, Huntingdon, and by Druggists and Merchants throughout the county. Price—$1 per bottle, large size. June 9, 1847.
