

HURD'S GRAMMATICAL CORRECTOR,
Or vocabulary of nearly two thousand of the common errors of speech; contained in no other work: The whole explained, corrected and conveniently arranged for the use of schools and private individuals.
BY SETH T. HURD,
Published by E. H. Butler & Co., Philadelphia.

CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL, Philadelphia, July 8, 1847.
We the undersigned cordially recommend "Hurd's Grammatical Corrector," as a text-book for schools, and as highly useful and convenient manual for private families and individuals.
Signed by JOHN S. HART, Principal, and nine Professors.

"We the undersigned Principals of the Public Schools of Philadelphia, recommend "Hurd's Grammatical Corrector," as a work eminent in calculation, not only to prevent the formation of incorrect modes of expression, but to eradicate those already acquired. It contains nearly two thousand of those common errors of speech which are not provided for in English Grammars, and hence is of very great importance as supplying a vacuum in our list of school books. Such a work is much needed in our Schools, and we hope the "Corrector" may receive that consideration to which its merits so justly entitle it.

Signed by JAMES MCCLUNE, Principal of the Master St. boy's gram. school, and 26 others.
Chamber of the Controllers of Public Schools.

"At a meeting of the Committee of the Controllers of Public Schools, held at the Controllers' Chamber, in the City of Philadelphia, on Friday July 30, 1847, the following resolution was unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That "Hurd's Grammatical Corrector," be introduced as a class book, &c.
Certified from the Minutes.
THOMAS B. FLORENCE, Sec'y.

"This is a highly useful publication, being an exposition, accompanied by corrections, of nearly 2000 inaccuracies of daily conversation, which the author has exhibited in a very strong light." Mr. Hurd merits much praise for his indefatigable labors in this department.—N. Y. Tribune.

"This work is precisely such a one as the community has long needed. It should be in the hands of all. Few persons will be able to look into its neatly printed pages without perceiving expressions with which their own lips are familiar, and the ineligibility or inaccuracy of which they have never suspected."—Phil. Spirit of the Times.

"There is here supplied a most admirable corrective of those provincial and barbarous expressions which so extensively prevail in conversation, and not infrequently in writing. The author has relied upon the best lexicographical authorities, and evinces a nice and discriminating knowledge of the meaning of words. For Schools and for general reference, this work may be commended with great safety as a guide to our vernacular tongue."—N. Y. Evangelist.

"A book of this kind was much needed as a means of eradicating the many cant phrases and barbarisms already flourishing among us. We have been much amused and edified in looking over its pages. It is admirably adapted for the use of schools, and must become a standard work throughout the country. It will also prove a most useful manual to have at hand in a family, as a book of reference, in cases where a phrase is used of doubtful character."—Phil. Sat. Post.

"Could we aid in placing a copy of this work in the hands of every reader, we should be doing a public service."—Phil. Sat. Courier.

"This is a most useful little volume."—Phil. Public Ledger.

"This is a highly valuable work, not only for Schools, but for private individuals. It contains nearly two thousand common errors of speech, the correction of which the author sustains by constant reference to standard authors, and by exceedingly well written notes and comments."—Phil. N. Am. & U. S. Gaz.

"This work must be productive of much good. The author has conferred a great benefit upon the English language."—Dollars Newspaper.

"This is a very timely, entertaining and useful book. We commend its introduction into all schools and families."—N. Y. Observer.

"This is a very useful book."—Godey's Lady's Book.

"This is an extremely valuable, as well as curious little volume; the result of great labor and research. We recommend it strongly to our school directors, and all concerned in education; nor to such only; we would recommend every man who wishes to correct his colloquial errors, to carry a copy of it in his pocket for 6 months as we intend to do ourselves."—Phil. American.

"On the 8th of July last, a large stereotype edition of several thousand copies of the "Corrector," was put into the market, since which time, being a little more than a month, the entire edition has been exhausted; more than two hundred teachers having already introduced the work into their schools.

The sanction it has received as a class-book, by an official resolution of a committee of the controllers of the public schools of Philadelphia (City and County, (which schools number upwards of forty thousand pupils), and the unparalelled favor with which it has been received by teachers and school directors, in various other portions of the country, as well as by the public generally, have rendered necessary an immense edition of twenty thousand copies, in order to supply the present, and keep pace with the increasing demand.
