FEVER & AGUE

SPEEDILY & THOROUGHLY CURED
Dr. Osgood's India Cholagogue

This excellent compound is for sale by the proprietor's Agent T. READ & SON.

Price $1 50 per bottle.

What is the matter with me, Doctor? What the cause of this sallow complexion, jaundiced eye, depression of spirits, pain in the side and shoulder, weariness of body, bitter taste in the mouth? Such is the enquiry, and such the symptoms of many a sufferer! It is the fever which is diseased, and the Cholagogue is the remedy always successful in curing it. Try it, and judge for yourself. For sale by T. Read & Son, agent for the proprietor.

Better die than live, if I am to be tortured from day to day with this horrible Ague, exclaims the poor sufferer whose life has become a burden from the racking paroxysms of an intermittent, and whose confidence in human aid is destroyed by the failure of remedies to produce the promised relief. Such has been the situation of thousands who are now rejoicing in all the blessings of health from the use of Dr. Osgood's India Cholagogue. In no instance does it fail of effecting a speedy and permanent cure. For sale by the proprietor's agent, T. READ & SON.

How few who think aright among the thinking few, How many never think, but only think they do.

The sentiment implied in the above explanation is on no subject more fully expressed than on that of health. But few give it a single thought, and fewer still reflect upon it with the observation and good sense which matters of minor consequence require. As observation teaches the fact that Dr. Osgood's India Cholagogue is a never failing remedy in Fever and Ague, good sense would surely indicate its prompt and immediate use. To be found at T. READ & SON'S, agent for the proprietor.

Early Marriage.

We are the friends, the decided friends of early marriages. But, in saying this, we do not mean to recommend marriages without means, or between persons of immature age, or where there is too vast a difference in social position. Generally, in this country, a woman at twenty, and a man at twenty-three or twenty-five ought to marry, if a partner of the proper kind can be found, and there is a sufficient income between the two for the comforts of life. A man, and we suppose a woman also, is happier and better for an early marriage. The heart wants something to love. The quiet pleasures of domestic life conduce also to health, to comfort, and to the proper developments of the moral affections.—An unmarried man—an old bachelor, according to the popular parlance—grows of necessity more and more selfish with every year; while the married man has his nature disciplined and improved by the duties, cares, sacrifices and felicity of conjugal life. There are exceptions, of course, to this rule, for there are crabbed Benedicts, as well as happy old bachelors, but the mass are as we described them. Our most charitable, our most influential, and our happiest men are the married men. And we will bet our existence that the married ladies are in the same category.

To enjoy felicity, or even content in wedded life, it is necessary that the union should be one of affection. We have no particular regard for what is called "puppy" love—the romantic attachments of misses of thirteen and boys entering college—but the affection of a few years later, and which is usually grounded on esteem, is a thing not to be despised. We are firm believers in what we call magnetism in love. A man may meet a thousand women, all charming, sensible, and even good looking, and may fall in love with neither, but, all at once, he is introduced to one to whom he loses his heart, though the world in general, and sometimes even his friends, cannot see in what she excels the others. And, perhaps, she does not excel them. Yet, "one star differeth from another star in glory;" and so one woman varies from another, without being, perhaps, superior in the abstract. We acknowledge the existence of affinities between men—why not, then, between the sexes? It is our way, at least, for accounting for the subtle thing called love. Such unions are generally happy. Marriages of convenience, or marriages managed by others, in two cases out of three, produce positive misery in the end. The wedded life has its trials, and it requires mutual affection to endure and conquer them.

We do not advise marriages without means. We have no patience when a foolish girl runs off with her music teacher, or some stage-struck youngster. To live in a comfortable home is a very different thing from living in a garret, or a three story back room, and they who venture on the experiment for the sake of an Italian whisgerando, will discover this to their cost. But on the other hand, wealth is not necessary to happiness; a share of "the fruits of the earth" is all we really want. As a general rule young people should not expect to have as large houses, or as fine furniture as their parents. It is best to begin in the world moderately. If a young man has an established business, whether he makes one thousand or ten thousand a year, let him get married.—He will find his joy heightened, and his cares eased by the society of a suitable wife, and, if he does not commit the error of being too extravagant, will never regret the step. Of course, people with small incomes must be economical at times. It will not answer to spend all that is made, for a rainy day is sure to come sooner or later, when, if there have been no savings, there must be distress. Every married man, however, pinched his means, ought to lay by something every year. Moreover, to do this is easier than the people think. All depends on habit. We know those who, on salaries of from seven hundred to a thousand dollars a year, annually save one, two or three hundred dollars, while others, with incomes ten times greater, are always in debt.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

MILLIONS OF BOUNTY LAND ACRES.—Of the regular army about thirty-five thousand men are entitled to bounty lands. The volunteers who are entitled to these lands are about fifty-five thousand. Fourteen millions four hundred thousand acres of land will be required to satisfy the claims of the soldiers in the Mexican war! This land, at the Government price, is worth eighteen millions two hundred thousand dollars.

The Potato rot is extending itself all over the country. We regret to learn that here in Iowa many of our farmers are complaining of having lost whole crops of this nutritious esculent.—Burlington Hawk Eye.

HOW TO ENLARGE VEGETABLES.—A vast increase of food may be obtained by managing judiciously, and systematically carrying out for a time, the principles of increase. Take, for instance, a pea.—Plant it in very rich ground, allow it to bear the first year, say half a dozen pods only, remove all others save the largest the following year, and retain of the produce three pods only; sow the largest the following year, and retain one pod; again select the largest and the next year the sort will have trebled its size and weight. Ever afterwards sow the largest seed, and by these means you will get peas or anything else of a bulk of which weat present have no conception.

SAM PATCH OUTDONE.—A Diving "Belle."—A funny incident happened yesterday on the Lawrence cars. A substantial, wholesome looking Irish lady was so intent in her gossip with a friend in the cars, just as they were starting from Lawrence, that she did not wake up to the reality until she was making a course for Boston at a twenty mile speed. The instant she perceived this she rushed for the door. Conductor Billings, a very gallant man, and exceedingly tender of woman kind, started to stop her and arrived at the platform just as the frightened woman made her leap.—Luckily the cars were on the canal bridge; and as she shot out, the speed of the train turned her over in the nearest of all possible somersets, and then down she went, straight as a meal bag, bonnet first, into the canal. The dive was beautiful, and as she arose, puffing with fright, a board was thrown to her, and she soon found herself, dripping like a fat maid, upon dry land, unharmed but a good deal scared, as well she might be. Last night she came up in the cars, looking as nice as a sun flower, and calm as a summer morning. Great doubt has been expressed as to the probable result of the tussle, had the gallant conductor succeeded in clasping her before the leap was made.—Lowell Jour.

STRINGY CABBAGES.—The Post has the following joke of a "hard case," who was accustomed to coming home late at night in a "corned" state, and taking a cold bite, which was usually set out for him by his kind and forgiving wife.

One night, beside the usual dish of cabbage and pork, she left a wash bowl filled with caps and starch. The lamp had long been extinguished, when the staggering sot returned home, and by mistake, when proceeding to satisfy his hunger, he stuck his fork into the wrong dish. He worked away at his mouthful of caps for some time, but being unable to masticate them, he hung out to his wife—

"Old woman, where did you get your cabbages? they are so stringy I can't chew them."

"My gracious," replied the good lady, "if the stupid fellow 'aint eat all my caps that I put in starch over night."

NEW MODE OF RAISING THE WIND.—Since the late insurrection in Paris a vast number of musicians, gipsies, jugglers and others, who frequented the Boulevards, and levied contributions on the passers by, have disappeared from the locality. One woman however is coining money, and deserves it for her shrewdness. At the fashionable hour for promenading on the Italian Boulevards, she takes her station there with a large cage, containing fifty imprisoned swallows, all huddled up together. She calls the attention of the loungers, especially the ladies to her cage, and repeats continually, in loud tones, "Set at liberty these poor little birds!" The words "liberty" acts like a charm, and many a heart is touched, and accepts the invitation. For two cents a head the work of deliverance is accomplished; and charitable souls have the satisfaction at that price of restoring the winged prisoners to air and space. By degrees the cage is emptied; and when there are no longer any in prison, the jailor returns to her home, and there again finds the whole flight. The swallows are trained, and only use their freedom to return quietly to the lodgings of their mistress, who renews the speculation several times a day.

"Tell your father," said John Randolph to a young friend, "that I recommend abstinence from novel reading and whiskey punch. Depend upon it, sir, they are both equally injurious to the brain."

The great cry with every body is, get on! get on! just as if the world was a travelling post. How astonished people will be when they arrive in heaven, to find the angels, who are so much wiser than they, laying no schemes to be made archangels!
