[From the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser.]

A MIDNIGHT ALARM.

I live in the outskirts of the city, in a house standing pretty much alone, and as I have heard a good deal of late of house-breaking in various quarters, I make it a rule to see that all our doors and windows are properly fastened at night before retiring to rest. In addition to this I sleep in a room so situated that if any of the doors were attempted to be forced, I would almost be sure to hear the noise

Two nights ago I awoke, I think it must have been about midnight, with the impresion that some noise had broken my slumber. After listening for a minute I heard a stealthy noise, as of some one using a wrenching instrument against either a door or window. I crept to my own room door, and soon ascertained that the noise proceeded, not from the front, but the basement, and could now hear quite distinctly the cautious working of chisel, as far as I could guess against the lower door.

I quickly put on my dressing gown, and stole as gently as I could along the passage, to a point near the few steps which led down to the basement, and from which I could see the door, while I was screened from observation my self. I say I could see the door, while in reality it was so pitch dark that I could see nothing but I thought the robbers might probably have a light with them, and that the position I had taken up was consequently the only rafe one. I was determined to wait till the villains had partly effected their purpose, and were fairly inside of the door, and then pouncing out upon them, deal as many heavy blows as I could with a good stout stick I held in my hand and make one of them, at least, should there be more, prisoner.—I knew how cowardly such wretches generally are, and that one strong arm, coming unexpectedly upon them, might put to flight a whole dozen.

such wretches generally are, and that one strong arm, coming unexpectedly upon them, might put to flight a whole dozen.

After some minutes, during which the noise was repeated several times, but without effect, I heard them commence the regular working of a saw or file I could not determine which. It was worked very cautiously and discontinued at intervals, as if to allow time for listening. The ruffians, I thought, have determined to do their work, but they will find me prepared for them.

At this moment I was started with a new noise—the opening of a door at my side. I looked around. A light streamed from the servant's door which slowly opened, and the girl appeared with lighted candle in her hand. I of course thought she too had heard the noise which had disturbed me, and was about to alarm the household. I therefore me, she glied as wifily along the passage and, descending the stairs stood at the door from which the noise had proceeded. I now heard her whispersoftly, while at the same time the dependent while and proceeded. I now heard her whispersoftly, while at the same time the dependent while and proceeded. I now heard her whispersoftly, while at the same time the dependent while and proceeded. I now heard her whispersoftly, while at the same time the dependent while the profit of the stairs while and proceeded. I now heard her while, and the idea of her thus concerting with robbers as the dead hourd in the first of the proceeded in the should be grant reascending the stairs. While she did so I was struck with the exempts of the features. There was a rigidity about them more like denth had life, and her eyes which were also quite fixed, had at the same time and wildness in it which make the same and any to this time would have trusted with anything, and the idea of her thus concerting with robbers and light the proposed with the same wildness in it while the same wildness in it while the same wildness in it where I was a superior to the same wildness in it where I was a superior to the same wildness in

"What," exclaimed I, "have you put a pig down underneath the stairs there."
"Yes," said my mother. "I forgot to tell you of it last night."
I burst into a loud laugh. The myswas solved. The wrenching operation had been performed by the pig thrusting his snout into some corner, the saw had been at work when he gave his back a grateful scratch, and the girl had played the somnambulist.

Supposing this to be a true narrative, and not a mere figment of the imagination, the coincidence of the pig, somnambulist, burglar, back-scratching and the rest was droll enough.

The System.
Lonnon, July 7, 1846.
The System are medicine which has just appeared, and is fast taking the places of alto there so the same class. These pills are composed of many ingredients, but the two principal ones are Sarsaparith and Wild Cherry, so united that they act together; the one, through it admix ure with other substances, purifying and purging, while the other is strengthening the system. Thus those pills are at the same time tonic and opening; a desideratum long and eagerly sought for by medical men but never before diegovered. In other words they do the work of twe medicines, and do it much better than any two we know of; for they remove nothing from the system but the impurities; so that while they purge they strengthen; and hence they cause no debilisation, and are followed by no re-action. Dr. Le Roy's pills have a wonderfulinfluence on the blood; they not only purify without weakening it, but they remove all noxious particles from the chyle before it is converted into fluid, and thus make impure blood an utter impossibility. Asthere no debilisation, so there is no aausea or sickness attending the operations of this most excellent of medicines which never strains or tortures the digestive functions, butcauses them to work in a perfectly natural manner; and hence persons taking them do not become pale and emaciated, but the contrary; for while it is the property of the Sarsaparilla, united as it is with other ingredients, to remove all that is foreign and impure, it is equally the property of the Wild Cherry to retain all that is natural and sound; and hence a robust state of health is the ectain result of their united operations.
