

[From the N. Y. Organ.]
THE DRUNKARD'S CHILD.
Here is a tale for the juveniles: a short story. Bless their little hearts—we would not give them a long one, lest they should leave it half read to go and play with their little hobbies, and never have patience to read us again.
There was once a boy. Now don't cry yet; for there has been once a boy and twice a boy; but this, we would have you to know, was a certain boy that lived in a certain place—we are not permitted to tell where. His mother became a woman of sorrows and died. That grieves us, but truth must be told. He and a little sister were left alone—alone, for their father was a drunkard. Hand in hand they went forth into the street, and sat down upon a marble carriage step, fronting a large brick dwelling. The cold stone-seat struck another chill to their desolate hearts; they looked into the windows of the rich mansion and saw young faces bright and happy there, glowing in the sunshine of health and plenty; and they wept. It made them feel more keenly their own hapless condition.
And there they sat—without covering to their heads or shoes to their feet, and their thin garments "all tattered and torn." A cold October wind blew upon them. They shivered and sat closer, and put their little feet together to keep them warm. As the stranger passed, they instinctively covered their pale faces to conceal their tears. At length a gentleman addressed them—
"Children, run home," said he—
"Why do you sit here and freeze?"
"Our mother has gone and left us," replied the boy. "There is no one left but my poor little sister and me. We looked at her old rocking chair, and saw it empty; and it made us cry and feel lonesome."
"And did she send you out to beg while she was gone?" asked the stranger.
"Oh, no," returned the boy, "dear mother taught us never to beg. Besides, she will never come back any more; for they put her into a coffin, and I took her away, and told us she was dead. And their tears ran afresh.
"But your father?" queried the stranger. "Where is he?"
The children shuddered perceptibly, but shook their heads, and made no reply. Their little hearts swelled with pride, and choked their utterance. They could not speak the words:—"Our father is a drunkard!"
The stranger, who had seemed rough and coarse in his manner, was touched. He quickly surmised the truth and asked of the boy—
"What are your names, my little lad?"
"Mary and James Milford," he quickly replied.
"The children of William Milford?" muttered the stranger with evident emotion, in a tone of half inquiry, as if to satisfy a suddenly occurring idea.
"Yes, sir," responded the boy; and at this moment the rude wild played roughly with their little bare heads and pierced their thin garments; the boy drew his sister still closer to his side; and the stranger was gone. In a few minutes after, a lady with a kind benevolent face, and we trust a warm heart, came and took them by the hand, and led them away.
A short time after this we attended a temperance meeting. One of the speakers in the course of his remarks, related as follows:
"For many years I kept a dram-shop. I heard of temperance doings in divers ways, and ridiculed them. I went to their meetings and made sport. I heard of wives being murdered, and children beggared through the influence of strong drink, and was unmoved. All argument assailed me in vain, for I was hardened in my course. One cold, windy day, I walked into the street and saw a little boy and girl half-naked and shivering, sitting on a stone step. They were a drunkard's children, I had known well in the days of prosperity. Never saw I more beautiful children. Their father had begun his drinking course, and squandered much of his property at my bar. His wife, a young and lovely woman, and once happy and joyous, had sunk into the grave, sorrowing and broken hearted. The sight of these motherless child—no so suffering and innocent—too noble to beg—too proud to own their father was a drunkard—accomplished what every other argument had failed to do. And I felt within my breast the sting of a murderer. From that day I never sold a drop of liquor. I took the children into my family; and they shall never want while I have a dollar to divide." It was James and Mary.
He paused. At this moment the pledge went round, and was spread upon the table. A man in a ragged and filthy garb came forward and subscribed his name. It was WALTER MILFORD.
My dear young readers, this is one little sketch enacted from the myriads of facts around us. If it interests you, the writer may one day give you another.

GRIST'S OXYGENATED MEDICINE FOR THE CURE OF DYSPEPSIA, GENERAL DEBILITY, &c., &c., &c.
STOP! STOP!
MY DEAR MAM READ THIS: If you have got DYSPEPSIA or ANTRIA suffer from general debility, or any complaint resulting from derangement of the stomach. You would give a good deal to get well, would you not? Then just give a LITTLE and try Green's Oxygenated Bitters. It is just the thing for you. The Doctor discovered this medicine only after long and careful study—to cure a friend too—not to make money out of it. Look at the evidence of its efficacy and you will be satisfied.
Hon. MYRON LAWRENCE cured of ASTHMA. BALSAM-CROW, March 16, 1848.
DR. GREEN—I take great pleasure in informing you of the effects of the medicine called Oxygenated Bitters you had the kindness to send me. For some twenty years I had suffered severely from humored Asthma. I was compelled to sit up one third of the night, without going to bed at all; and the rest of the time my sleep was interrupted by violent fits of coughing and great difficulty of breathing. In all my attendance upon our courts I never went to bed in Northampton in twenty years but twice, and then was compelled to get up. Now I lie in bed without difficulty, and sleep soundly. I took your medicine according to directions. The violent symptoms immediately abated, and perseverance in the use of the remedy has removed all its troublesome consequences. The value of such a remedy is incalculable and I hope its virtues may be widely diffused and its beneficent agency extensively employed.
Respectfully yours
MYRON LAWRENCE.

DYSPEPSIA CURED.
CARLEISK, Pa. June 10, 1848.
Messrs. Collier & Bro.
Gentlemen—In reply to your note as to the effect of the Oxygenated Bitters in my case I would say that I have been afflicted with Dyspepsia about six years, and have tried many known remedies, but obtained no relief until a friend recommended the Oxygenated Bitters. I was finally induced to procure two bottles of you, and I had not taken half a bottle before I felt its effects upon my system, and after the use of the second bottle I found myself in a state of health as unexpected as it was gratifying. To the afflicted I have no hesitation in recommending the Bitters, as superior to any medicine I have ever heard of for the cure of Dyspepsia.
Very Respectfully yours,
MADSON M. LEWIS.

The following Certificates have recently been received:

LONDON, July 7, 1846.
DR. LE ROY'S Pills are a new medicine which has just appeared, and is fast taking the place of all others of the same class. These pills are composed of many ingredients, but the two principal ones are Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry, so united that they act together; the one through it acts with other substances, purifying and purging, while the other is strengthening the system. Thus these pills are at the same time tonic and purging; a desideratum long and eagerly sought for by medical men, but never before discovered. In other words they do the work of two medicines, and do it much better than any two we know of; for they remove nothing from the system but the impurities; so that while they purge they strengthen; and therefore cause no debilitation, and are followed by no re-action. Dr. Le Roy's pills have a wonderful influence on the blood; they not only purify without weakening it, but they remove all its vitious principles from the chyle, before it is converted into fluid, and thus make impure blood an utter impossibility. As there is no debilitation, so there is no nausea or sickness attending the operations of this most excellent of medicines, which never strains or tortures the digestive functions, but causes them to work in a perfectly natural manner; and hence persons taking them do not become pale and emaciated; but the contrary; for while it is the property of the Sarsaparilla, united as it is with other ingredients, to remove all its foreign and impure, it is equally the property of the Wild Cherry to retain all that is natural and sound; and hence a robust state of health is the certain result of their united operations.
