

Rules for Business Men.

Take advantage of moderate facilities, and accomplish as much in a single day, as occurs weeks, months or years, formerly.

Use the means; they are open to all.

Don't depend upon your own lungs alone—use the lungs of the Press.

Make it known that you are prepared to do business.

Confess ignorance on subjects in which you are uninformed: live and learn.

Be silent when a fool prates—he will cease the sooner: you cannot gain by converse.

Be ashamed of nothing but your own errors.

He who arms his intent with virtue is invincible.

Let the business of others alone, and attend to your own.

Don't buy what you don't want—use every hour to the best advantage, and study even to make leisure hours useful.

Find recreation in looking after your business, and your business will not be neglected, in looking after recreation.

Buy fair—sell fair—and take care of the profits.

Should misfortune overtake you, retrench—work harder—but never fly the track—confront difficulties with unflinching perseverance—should you then fail you will be honored, but shrink and you will be despised.

Be civil and obliging to all—it costs nothing and is worth much.

Rest satisfied with doing well, and leave others to talk as they will.

Never complain of being ill used.

Sell at small profits—for cash—and make it known through newspapers.—V. B. Palmer's business man's Almanac.

A Cute Yankee.

Some time since, a slab sided mortal from down East, who looked as if he had passed through a shingle mill, called a respectable establishment in Philadelphia, and inquired,

"Is this Burlap, Jean & Co's store?"

"Yes Sir."

"Well then, I reckon I owe you a small bill."

"What name sir?"

"Zerubable Snooks."

After overhauling the ledger, Zurbabella was assured it could not be him, as his name was not on the books.

"A darned pretty way to keep 'em then! I guess if a man owed me a matter of three hundred dollars I could tell the date without looking. However I don't want to cheat you. I know this is the place. Just give me a receipt for two hundred and twenty-five dollars and fifteen cents."

"Never mind the cents, Mr. Snooks, here's your receipt for the dollars."

"Mighty careless you be of small matters. One hundred cents make a dollar where I came from, fifteen cents aint to be sneezed at.—Good morning."

Messrs. Burlap, Jean & Co. were electrified at the honesty of the down Easterner, and would not let him go so readily. They insisted on his purchasing a bill of goods, but Zerubable was unwilling.

"It was darned hard to pay for them," he said, "he'd been all winter raising that!" But to their great gratification, they succeeded in securing so good a customer, by selling him a bill of a thousand dollars, for six months.

When the time of payment had arrived, and no note of the demand was forwarded to the address of the down Easterner, the letter remained unanswered. The account was sent to a limb of the law, resident in the town from which he hailed, and the next mail brought Burlap, Jean & Co., the agreeable intelligence, that no such man as Zerubable Snooks ever lived there.

PROF. FELTON, of Cambridge University, corrects a statement as to his having been bitten by a mad dog, in a note to the Transcript, closing thus:

Having satisfied myself that he had not drawn blood, I did not experience the smallest anxiety. The poor beast has doubtless fallen a victim to "public sentiment" ere this:

"The man recovered from the bite, the Dog it was that died."

Very sincerely, but not rabidly yours, C. C. FELTON.

"An old Man," complains that boy's come to see his darters, but say nothing about marrying them—this he does not like—he says, "gals must get husbands when they are young, if ever they get them!" and therefore, "those fellers who have no notion of being married, have no business to take up the gals' time for nothing, and thereby keep better boys away."

NOVEL MARRYING OPERATION.—A man by the name of Alvord, left this city and a wife 21 years ago, and went to South America. His wife married again, supposing that he was dead. Her second husband died, and she married again. She lives with her third husband in this city at the present time. Last week her first husband returned, safe and sound.—Hartford Times.

A robustious countryman meeting a physician, ran to hide behind a wall; being asked the cause he replied, "It is so long since I have been sick, that I am ashamed to look a physician in the face!"

Great Economy in Kindling Fires.

THE attention of County Merchants, Peddlars, and Dealers generally, and families are respectfully invited to a composition called EVEREVE'S PAPERT FIRE KINDLING, an article much needed and in demand from all quarters. FIFTY CENTS will supply one fire every day for 6 months. It is neatly done up in packages, each containing 24 cakes—each cake 10 inches square,—one of which instantaneously taking fire from contact with a lighted match will ignite Charcoal, Wood and Bituminous Coal, and with one-fourth the ordinary quantity of wood or charcoal will kindle the Anthracite.
