BY JAS. CLARK.

HUNTINGDON, PA., TUESDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1849.

VOL. XIV, NO. 48

PUBLIC SALE, BY ASSIGNEES.

The undersigned assignees of Blair and Madden, will sell on the premises, on Wednesday 19th day of December, 1849.

Melinda Iron Works.
situate on the Aughwick creek, in Cromwell township, Huntingdon county, Pa., and within a few miles of the Pennsylvania Canal and Railroad. The works consist of a charcoal furnace and Forge nearly new, and Saw Mill, all in good order, and the usual and necessary houses and buildings attached thereto, together with about 520 acres of land adjoining the works, about 70 acres cleared and in a good state of cultivation, and the remainder of the premises is timber and woodland upon which some iron ore has been found convenient to the furnace. To any person wishing to engage in the iron business, the above works offer great inducements; they are located in a healthy and thriving neighborhood, where labor and materials are comparatively cheap. Good ore can be had convenient to the furnace, and timber at very moderate prices; the Aughwick creek gives ample water power at all seasons of the year.

Also—On the same day, one Tract of Land in Springfield township, containing 75 acres well improved, and a good quality of land, lying on Aughwick creek.

Also—Will be sold on Thursday the 25th day of December 1849, one tract of slate land, containing 160 acres, in Dublin township, well improved and in a good state of cultivation.

Also—On the same day will offer for sale a number of lots of ground in the village of Claysville, in Dublin township.

Also—On the same day, about 70 acres of timber land in Cromwell township, part lying in Shade Gap, where there is a good seat for water works, and good water power.

Also—On the same day, a tract of limestone land in Dublin township containing about two hundred acres, well improved and in a good state of cultivation.

Also—95 acres of timber land adjoining the above tract.

Attendance given and terms made known on day of sale.

THOS. E. ORBISON

THE BOSTON TRAGEDY.

Supposed Murder of Dr. Parkman. Arrest of Prof. Webster.

The city papers mention that a great sensation has been produced in Boston by the supposed murder of a wealthy citizen of that place, named Dr. Parkman. Several days ago he mysteriously disappeared, and no clue of him could be obtained. On the 30th ult., however, as we learn by a telegraph despatch in the North American, the mutilated remains of a body supposed to be that of Dr. Parkman were found under the Boston Medical College, where he was last seen alive; and suspicion at once settled on Dr. John Webster, one of the Professors of the institution, as the murderer! He was immediately arrested and lodged in jail. When arrested he displayed great agitation. So far however the evidence is only of a circumstantial character. The excitement in the city, growing out of his arrest, was so great that the authorities found it necessary to order out the military to prevent a popular outbreak.

The Boston papers of Monday are filled with the details of the investigation into the circumstances attending the supposed murder of Dr. George Parkman, and which have led to the arrest of Prof. Webster, of Harvard University. It appears that in the early part of the month of November, Dr. Parkman called at Professor Webster's lecture room, in the Medical College in North Grove street, while the Professor was engaged in delivering a lecture before the students, and waited until the lecture was over, and the students had all left. He then asked Professor Webster for the money due him, and after some conversation, in which both parties were considerably excited, Professor Webster desired him to wait until the 23d of November, as all the tickets for the lectures, engaged by the students, had not been paid for, but would in all probability be by that time. Dr. Parkman, it is stated, left the building a good deal excited. On Thursday afternoon November 22d, Dr. Parkman called at the residence of Professor Webster, in Cambridge, who being absent, he left word with his wife, that he wished to have her husband call at his (Dr. Parkman's) house the next morning. On Friday morning, November 23d, the day after, about 9 o'clock, Professor Webster called at Dr. Parkman's house in Walnut street, the Dr. being out, he left word for him that he could pay him, if he would call at his room at the College soon after 1 o'clock. Dr. Parkman, Professor Webster states, called at the Medical College about half past one o'clock, and was paid by him (Webster) $483.64, which amount was to take up two notes and cancel a mortgage. Dr. Parkman gave up the notes, but had not the mortgage with him—viz, however, said he would go and cancel it. This transaction, Dr. Webster says, took place at the counter in his lecture room, and that Dr. Parkman left the room through the door near the main entrance to the building.

Since half past one o'clock on Friday the 23d, the time he was seen by a number of people to enter the College, nothing of a reliable nature has come to light as to his whereabouts. He was seen to enter the College, but no one has been found who saw him come out of it; and this fact produced an impression in the minds of a number—more strongly in that of Mr. Kingsley, Dr. Parkman's agent—that he never did come out of it. The College is built upon walls which rest upon piles, and the tide ebbs and flows through apertures underneath the basement floor, between the compartments formed by the walls. One of these compartments forms what is termed the vault underneath Professor Webster's laboratory. There is a trap door to the compartment next to that used by Prof. Webster, situated some forty feet from the water closet. Littlefield descended through this trap door on Friday, with a crow-bar, and knocked an aperture in the wall near the water closet, and discovered, about 4 o'clock that afternoon, portions of a human body, which had been washed by the sea. These portions were the pelvis, the right thigh, and the right leg. Littlefield immediately proceeded to Dr. Bigelow's office, and acquainted him with the fact, as we understand, in the most excited manner, saying, 'I have found it!' and repeating these words so often that Dr. Bigelow took hold of him and told him to be quiet—that he acted like a crazy man.

Dr. Bigelow went to the City Marshal's office that afternoon, and informed Mr. Tukey of the discovery which had been made, who immediately, with some officers, proceeded to the college and found it was so. Mr. Tukey then gave directions for the arrest of Professor Webster, and officers Clapp, Starkweather, and Spurr, proceeded to his residence in Cambridge in a carriage for that purpose. They arrived at the house about nine o'clock, just as Dr. Webster was showing a visitor out. The officers met him at the gate and, told him that the college officers were met in consultation on the subject of Dr. Parkman's disappearance, and had sent for him to attend it. He made no objection, and while on the way to Boston he conversed cheerfully and freely, and, referring to Dr. Parkman's having been at the college, said that he stopped at the doctor's house on Friday morning, and requested him to call at the college for his money between 1 and 2 o'clock that day. The carriage was halted at the jail, and the party went into the office, and then, for the first time, Dr. Webster began to perceive that there was something strange in the proceedings of the officers, and asked what they had come to the jail for when their destination was the college in Grove street, remarking, also that they had come out of the way. Clapp then said—"Dr. Webster, it is no use to disguise our purpose any further. You are under arrest, on suspicion that you know something about the death of Dr. Parkman, parts of whose body have been found under your laboratory. We shall look no more for the body." Upon hearing this accusation, Dr. Webster staggered backwards, as if struck to the heart, and uttered various exclamations about his family and children and also saying—"The villain! I am ruined;" or, "The villain! He has ruined me." All who were present agreed that he did not say that he was "betrayed."

One of the officers thinks, from some broken sentences that he caught, that the prisoner said something about some one having placed the limbs where they were found, for the purpose of obtaining the reward, and that the discovery of them there would involve the prisoner's ruin. His excitement was intense, and he exhibited symptoms of convulsions.—Water was handed to him, but he could not reach it to his mouth, nor could he get any down, when the glass was held to his lips. When asked if he was willing to go to the medical buildings with them and see what they had found there he expressed his perfect willingness to do so; but he was so weak and overpowered by his emotions, that he was unable to get up and walk, and had to be taken to the carriage by the officers of the jail. From the jail he was carried to the medical buildings.

Arrived there and in his own room, the portions of the body that had been discovered were shown to him. On seeing them, he instantly went into the most violent convulsions, and cried for water. Water was handed him, and at the first sight of it, he repulsed those who offered it with as much violence as would a person writhing in the deepest agonies of hydrophobia. He seemed to be in a perfect tempest of internal torture. The sight of the water crazed him! He appeared wild, ghastly, filled with fear! He fairly writhed with torment! The scene was truly a terrific one to those who were compelled to behold it, and probably will never pass out of their memory. It was already eleven o'clock at night, and a supposed murderer had grown frantic on their showing him the mutilated corpse of his unhappy victim! It was a sight to curdle the coldest blood, and fill the stoutest man with terror! Tragedies, with scenes like this in them are often played, but rarely enacted!

In this state of convulsions and frenzy he continued for some time, and nothing could be drawn from him. He was carried back by the officers to the jail and there confined.

After he returned to the jail the prisoner became somewhat more calm. He stated that no one had access to his apartments in the College but himself, and could not have such access but with his keys. He not only had the keys of those apartments in his possession, but also the key, a large one of the water closet under which the remains were found. This closet was within the laboratory, and not accessible from without that apartment; and the door was locked when the limbs were found below. Saturday morning brought with it still further discoveries. Officer Rice, in arranging things in the laboratory, found, in a recess formed by the brick work of the furnace and chimney, a tea chest, apparently filled with specimens of minerals, but emitting a strange odor. He at once upset the chest, and found in the bottom, embedded in hemlock bark, the left thigh and half roasted trunk of the body. The skin had been wholly burned or stripped off from the trunk.—The thigh was only stained with the bark. All the parts found are such in size that they may very well have belonged to Dr. P.'s body. The missing portions, and supposed to have been burned up, are the head, contents of the

Among the secondary facts, it may be stated that four bloody towels were found in the vault, a very large clasp knife, with hunting figures on the blade, was found with the trunk in the tea chest; some grapples, made of cod hooks with lines and lead sinker attached, were found in Dr. Webster's apparatus room. This room is in the rear of the lecture room, and connected with it by a door. On the inner side of the apparatus room is a large closet. Near the door of this closet, on the floor, commenced scattered marks of blood, which extend the whole length of the apparatus room, and appear on nearly every step of the stairs leading from the room down into the laboratory. Dr. Webster's official duties as a professor required of him no handling of bodies, nor was it allowable to have subjects in that part of the building. On Sunday a pair of trousers, marked with Dr. Webster's name, and with marks of blood upon them, were found in the large closet; also, under a settee in the room, a pair of slippers, marked with spots of blood; also, a small saw, with a blood stain.

On Saturday afternoon, Col. Pratt, Coroner, summoned a jury of inquest, and at 4 o'clock they proceeded to the college, examined the remains as they were laid out on a board, and the contents of the furnace, and then passed them into the hands of Drs. Winslow, Lewis, Martin Gay, and J. B. S. Thatcher, for such further examinations as can be made of them.

The doctors mentioned entered upon the investigation on Sunday, and found fragments of calcined bones from each of the missing parts of the body. There was something like the appearance of a wide stab on the left side of the trunk, but it was not made absolutely clear whether the incision was made before or after death.

Dr. Parkman was very wealthy, and had been for many years largely engaged in real estate transactions, and in loaning money on mortgages. He occupied a high position, and by marriage is connected with the first families of Boston. He is a brother to the Rev. Francis Parkman. One of his sisters married the late Edward Tuckerman, Esq., and another, his brother Joseph Tuckerman, the distinguished divine; a third sister is the wife of Robert G. Shaw, Esq., the eminent merchant.—Dr. Parkman lost his wife several years since. He has two children—a son and daughter, and has left a large circle of highly respectable relatives and friends to mourn his melancholy death. Dr. Webster has been more successful in acquiring fame as a scientific man, than in making money, and was in debt to Dr. Parkman. Out of this relation sprung disputes between them.

Dr. Webster has been, for upwards of twenty years, Professor of Chemistry at Cambridge. He has a wide circle of acquaintance, and has maintained throughout life an unblemished reputation. He is about 50 years of age, and has a wife and four children. He has paid a strict attention to the duties of his profession, and his conduct has been marked by uniform sobriety and steadiness. His disposition was frank and open, his manners lively and social; he was esteemed by all who knew him as a good citizen, and a peaceful neighbor, and a kind and affectionate husband and father. In every moral and intellectual characteristic, he might be regarded as one who was placed beyond the suspicion of a tendency to the commission of crime.

The excitement created on Saturday morning did not last over night. The disclosures at the College formed the general subject of conversation yesterday, but there was not at any time to our knowledge—either on Saturday, or yesterday, any indication of riot displayed. The largest collection of people at the College, at any one time, did not exceed 150 persons, and many of the visitors were most respectable citizens. The military received orders at an early hour on Saturday, to be in readiness in their armories. This order was not confined to the Boston companies alone. Two companies of Infantry at Roxbury, received a similar order, and were "up in arms" all Saturday night.

We heard from Leverett street jail last evening. Dr. Webster had become more calm, but still manifested some excitement. He slept sound during Saturday night. An officer in his cell constantly.

THE BODY OF DR. PARKMAN IDENTIFIED.—Boston, Dec. 4.—The teeth and jaw found in Prof. Webster's grate have been identified by Dr. Keop, the dentist who operated on Dr. Parkman's mouth, a short time since. The jaw also fits the mould taken at that time.

The family of Dr. P. has claimed the body for interment, and have had the same enclosed in a leaden box preparatory to burial. The body has a stab in the ribs, through into the cavity of the chest.

Professor Webster is still in prison, and remains perfectly calm.

A little boy hearing his father say that 'there is a time for all things,' climbed up behind his mother's chair, and whispering in her ear, asked when was the proper time for looking sugar out of the sugar bowl!
