

Mr. Root's Resolution.

The vote by which Mr. Root's territorial resolution was laid upon the table indicates, we think, a disposition in the House of Representatives to acquiesce in the policy proposed by the President in respect to California and New Mexico.

Admit, then, California when she presents herself with a State constitution. Suffer New Mexico to remain as she is, with more order and a better administration of her own system than she ever had until she too can organize a commonwealth, frame her own constitution to suit herself, and apply, as she can at the next session of Congress—or at the present, if need be—for admission into the Federal Union.

To accomplish this result, to carry out the policy and plan of the President, it is obvious that collateral conflicting propositions must meet the fate of Mr. Root's resolution. We believe that the public sentiment of every section is prepared to see such a disposition of all such interfering plans.

The investigation of the Coroner continued from Monday until about 8 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when a verdict was rendered. It was shown that the deceased, Catharine Louisa Adams, had been intimate for something more than a year past, with a man keeping a stable in Lawrence, named Darius Taylor; that this intimacy first began in Lowell, the deceased being at the time a factory girl in that city.

After passing some weeks in Boston with her friends, deceased again made her appearance in Lawrence, and on the evening of the 21st December last, she was seen to enter the house of Dr. Moses P. Clark, since which it does not appear she has been seen alive.

After a full and careful investigation, the jury of inquest rendered the following verdict: "That Catharin L. Adams came to her death between the evening of the 21st Dec. last past, and the 5th of Jan. following, 1850, at the house of Moses P. Clark, in Lawrence, by means of an attempt to procure abortion—followed by a blow or blows on the head with some weapon or instrument, and by suffocation from or the application of cotton cloth over the mouth, done by some person or persons to the jury unknown."

Dr. Clark and his wife had been previously arrested, and after the rendition of the above verdict, they were arraigned on the charge of murder before the Police Justice, and their examination assigned on Tuesday next.

grasping his throat and at the same time knocking the pistol from his hands, which went off and slightly wounded one of the men in the hand. Johnson, by this prompt movement saved his own life. Carson was at once overpowered, and then surrendered. They refused to let him return into the house for his clothes but brought them out and compelled him to dress in the street.
