

Death from Superstition.

David Boston a colored man, died near Ichester, Md., on the 1st inst., a victim to superstition and knavery. The Howard Gazette says: Some three months before his death, it appears he was taken sick with a cold. He suffered from the accumulation of phlegm on the chest; and from the choking sensation and hoarse sound in breathing, he and his wife concluded he had a frog in him, and that somebody had tricked him. His wife accordingly went to Baltimore to consult a harpy called a 'Fortune Teller,' a white person, who tully confirmed, of course, their notions, and told her that the first person who should visit the house after her return home was the 'tricker.' She was also further instructed to let nothing come in nor nothing go out of the house. After his wife's return, a neighboring colored man went to the house, but was driven away from the place by Boston's wife. The poor victim took little or no nourishment—no one was allowed to visit him, until he died the victim of ignorance and wicked advice.—After his death, about fifty small calico balls were found about him, having been placed there to break 'the spell.'

Good Advice to Pic-Nickers.

The Sunday Times gives the following reasonable hints on the formation and conduct of pic-nicks:—

Two ingredients, however, are absolutely necessary—a smart humorist and a good butt. A pick-nick party without these would be like a pantomime without a clown and pantaloons. Avoid engaged pairs. They sneak off into secluded spots to bill and coo, and contribute nothing to the common stock of fun. Beware of bores. One bore is capable of turning the gayest troop of merry-makers that ever started to enjoy a fete champetre into a pater-grievous set of mourners. People that are afraid of a shower should have nothing to do with pic-nicks, as a rain-storm usually 'comes off' during the performance. Roast chickens, boiled hams, bottled porter, light hearts, champagne, sparkling eyes, accessible lips, the gift of the gab, a capacity for punning, natural or acquired from Joe Miller, [Joe Barber would do as well.—D. B.] good pedestrian faculties, and an indisposition to imbibe the rheumatism from damp grass, are absolute requisites to pic-nick parties.

A western paper informs us that "a lady, while stepping into one of the cars with a pair of spectacles on mised her footing, and came near losing her life." A car with a pair of spectacles on, must be a curiosity.

Talking of "enlarging" newspapers, the editor of the Chicago Journal suggests that it's not the largest calf that makes the best veal!

MARRIED.

On the 13th inst., by the Rev. W. R. Mills, JOHN McCORD, Esq., of Millin co., to Miss ELIZA GLAZER, of this borough.

THE MARKETS.

PHILA. June 25, 1850. There is but little activity in the market and prices have undergone no material change. In Flour there is but little doing. Sale of 800 lbs of good brands for shipment at $5.25 per bbl, and some extra at $5.50. Rye-Flour is in limited demand at $3. Corn Meal is but little inquired after. A small sale at $3 per bbl. Gram—There is but little Wheat Offering, and it is wanted. We quote Red at $1.20a1.22; and White at $1.30 per bushel. Corn is in good demand for shipment, and Yellow is taken on arrival at 62c. Oats are steady at 43a44c per bu and meet a ready sale.
