It is a lit-singular that American farmers do not turn the singular that American farmers do not turn their attention to these fowels. A knowing Jer-seyman named David Bonner, from Englad, hir-ed a patch of five acres four years ago, and com-menced raising eggs for the New York market. Bonner has never hired any help, and at this mo-ment owns a farm for which he paid $4700, of which the buildings cost over $3000. His farm is all paid for—he owes not a cent in the world, and he owns a flock which varies from 800 to 1200 Guinca hens.
