That seventy years, we have grored, would be gone forever. Deeply impressed by these considerations, and relying most confidently on the entire sympathies of the General Assembly of the State, which has never known an instant's disloyally to the Union, I solemally protest against the utterance of rash and ill-advised thoughts on a subject so dear to our constitu-ency, and more earnestly against all deliber-ation by means of conventions, or other modes of action, unknown to the Constitu-tion, and having for their object, either the dissolution of the Union, or the discussion of sectional and hazardous questions, for the decision of which, the Constitution has made ample provision. Pennsylvania venerates and cherishes the unimpaired institutions of our fahers.

is couched in such insolent and arrogant terms, that its reading in the Senate excited contempta-tous ridicule and roars of laugher. Mr. Webster's reply, evidently dictated rather by a desire to place upon the public archives a full exposition of the principles involved, than to notice the impertinences of Mr Hule en an's letter, is an admirable avoval of the course which the United States deems it proper to pursue in encouraging the down-trodden and oppressed of every nation. Our limited space precludes its publication at length, but the following abstract given by the Washington correspondent of the North American, will give the reader a correct iden of the main points of the domment. " The Secretary of State begins his letter by no-ticing the principal ground of protest alleged by Mr. Hulsemann—that this government, by the mis-sion of Mr. Mann, and the instructions which he this answer to this objection, is one of the great points which will attract public attention, in the United States, and excite the comment of Europe. Though the principale has been announced before, it has never yet appeared with the same imposing authority. Mr. Webster assorts that President ation by means of conventions, or other modes of action, unknown to the Constitution, and having for their object, either the dissolution of the Union, or the discussion of eetional and hazardous questions, for the discussion of which, the Constitution has made ample provision. Pennsylvania venerates and cherishes the unimpaired institutions of our fathers.

With the fervent prayer that Almightly God will so direct the deliberations of the General Assembly, that "peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety, may be established among us for all generations," the suggestions and recommendations contained in this annual message are respectfully submitted for your consideration and records of the corres ding to trepy. Some persons are capable of making great stratifices, but few are capable of concealing how much the effort has cost them; and it is this constitutes their value.
Mr. Webster repils the imputation that the neuristice, and it is this constitutes their value.

Ledger Office Destroyed by Fire.

We now an above the insumance. The Ledger Building was probably the most ex-tensive printing establishment in the United States, and its machinery was considered the finest in the world—more complete even than those of London and Paris. It was occupied altogether by the Pab-lie Ledger printing office, the office of the Dollar Newspaper, and the United States Job Printing Establishment. One room on Third street was occupied as a publication and periodical store, late-ly kept by A. Winch, but now by Messrs. Wood & Peterman. They lost, we believe, everything. The Bulletin office, adjoining, was also in great danger, but escaped with slight injury. We regret to learn that several firemen were severely injured.
