Retribution--The Gullotine.

Mr. Iredell:

It is a curious coincidence in history that the Frenchman who invented that deadly engine, the Guillotine, was among the number of its decapitated victims.

A similar moral lesson, and a like fatal catastrophe, has just been developed at the Baltimora Convention. A score of political heads have fallen by the descending stroke of the two-third Rule. Mr. Cass and his friends framed the timbers and temperad the axe which gave VAN BUREN his quietus eight years ago, and now under precisely similar circumstances, it has accomplished his own execution, and laid him and all the other leading Democratic politicians in their graves. Who will say after this that there is no Providential interposition in political affairs? Alas for the great Michigander! Henceforth, the men who grow gray in the service of their party, and of the Republic, must stand aside while humble citizens are fished up from the ocean of obscurity, to fill their well earned places. Sic toansit gloria mundi. It is a lesson full of instruction, and moral and political reflections crowd on the mind, contemplating it. Of all the heroes and civilians who ran with eager haste to define their positions, and prostrate themselves at the feet of Mister Scort, of Virginia, none have drawn aught but a blank. What a spectacle have we here for those who stultify themselves, or "bend the supple hinges of the knee that thrift may follow fawning."

CATO.

which were unanimously adopted after which the Convention adjourned with nine cheers for Winfield Scott:

Resolved, That we, the Whigs of Pennsylvania, in State Convention assembled, do most cordially ratify the nomination of General Winfield Scott for the Presidency of the United States, this day made by the National Whig Convention at Baltimore. We adopt him as our candidate, and heartily subscribe to the declaration of principles of that body.

Resolved, That the nomination of General Winfield Scott is particularly gratifying to Pennsylvania, inasmuch as he has been for years the first choice of a large portion of her citizens for that distinguished station. His fame is dear to us, as forming part of the brightest pages of the history of our common country, and that he lives enshrined in the hearts of Pennsylvania's gallant sons, whom he has so often led to victory and to glory.

Resolved, That we call upon every Whig of the North, the South, the East, the West, to strike in boldly for the achievement of a glorious victory in the election of one whose triumphant sword successfully defended our Northern frontier—whose unparalleled success in arms aided in extending our Southern borders to the blue Pacific—whose civil services have been eminently successful in the North, the South, the East and the West—whose capacious mind is capable of comprehending the interests of all and whose patriotic heart beats with pure love for our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country.

Resolved, That in our hour of exultation we are not unmindful of the eminent

Resolved, That the gigantic intellect and great public services of Daniel Webstef command our gratitude and respect, as well as that of the whole civilized world; and our mighty country does not bound his fame. Wide as the gift of speech and the power of the press are extended, his glowing oratory and his resistenced, his glowing oratory and his resistenced, his glowing oratory and his resistenced.

The moment Scott reached the deck.

The moment Scott ascertained the object of the British officers, he commanded his men to answer no more questions, in order that no other selection should be made by the test of speech. He commanded them to remain silent, and they strictly obeyed.—
This was done in spite of the threats of the British officers, and not another man was separated from his campanions. Scott was repeatedly commanded to go below, and high altercations ensued. He addressed the party selected, and explained to them fully the reciprocal obligations of allegiance and protection assuring them that the United States would not fail to avenge their gallant and faithful soldiers; and finally pledged himself in the most solemn manner that retaliation and, if necessary, a refusal to give quarter in battle, should follow the execution of any one of the party. In the midst of this animated harangue, he was frequently interrupted by the British officers, and, though unarmed, could not be silenced."

The Irishmen thus selected were all sexchanged he hastened to Washington, and reported the transaction to the Secretary of War, who, in turn, laid it before Congress. The result was the passage of an act (3d of March, 1813.) empowering the President of the United States to retaliate. Scott, soon after, in subsequent engagements, captured a number of prisoners, and, true to the pledge he gave at Quebec, he selected 23 of the number to be confined in the interior of the country, to abide, there, the fate of the 23 Irishmed taken at Queenstown, and sent to England for trial.

The result of this firm resolution on the part of Scott, and of the legislature consequent upon his efforts, was not only to save the lives of the twenty-three Irish prisoners, but to impel England, throughout the remainder of the war, to respect the rights of our naturalized citizens, by virtually abandoning her claim to perpetual allegiance.—New York Express.
