DOCTORS DIFFER.

DOCTORS DIFFER. That doctors differ, has become a com-mon proverb: and truly, considering the seculiar disadvantages under which they abour, their variences are less wonderons than matters of course. If any man yorks in the dark, like a mole, it is the physician. He has continually, as it were, to divine the eolor of a pig in a poke—or a cat in the dark. If is called in to a suspected trunk without the policeman's privilege of search. He is expleted to pass judge-ment on a physical tragedy going on in the house of life, without the the critic's free admission to the performance. He is tasked to set to rights a disordered econony, with-out, as the Scotch say, going "ben," and must guess at riddles, hard as Sampson's, is to an animal with a honey-coub inside. In fact, every malady is an enigma, and when the doctor gives you over, he "gives it me." A few weeks aco, one of these In fact, every malady is an enigma, and when the doctor gives you over, he "gives it up." A few weeks ago, one of these puzzles, and a very intricate one, was pro-posed to the faculty at a metropolitan hos-pital. The disorder was dyspepsy : the patient writhed and groaned in agony— but his lights, as usual, threw none on the subject. In the meantime the case made a noise, and medical men of all degrees and descriptions, magnetizers, homeconathand descriptions, magnetizers, homeopath-ists, hydropathists, mad doctors, sane docind user riptions, imgeotoxis, induced parti-lists, hydropathists, mad doctors, some doc-tors, quack doctors, and even horse doc-tors, flocked to the ward, inspected the symptoms, and then debated and disputed on the nature of the disease. It was in the brain, the heart, the liver, the nerves, the muscles, the skin, the blood, the kid-neys, the "globes of the lungs," the "mo-mentum," the "pantras," and the "capil-lairo vessels." Then for its nature: it was chronic, and acute, and intermittent, and non-contageous, and "ketching," and 'electic," and Lord knows what besides. However, the discussion ended in a complete wrangle, and every doctor being mounted on his own theory, never was there such a scene since the grand combat of hobby horses at the the grand combat of hobby horses at the end of Mr. Bayes's rehearsal !

solution of Mr. Bayes's rehearsal! SARATOGA. Isten to the way in which Mr. Sulivan, a recent English tradler in the U. States, sets down the fashions of Young America at its great watering-place.—"Saratoga, the Cheltenham of America.—though from the vulgarisms one sees perpetrated there, it reminded one more of Ramsgate in Au-gust.—is the paradise of snobs, and is, with-out exception, the most odious place I ever open twenty-four hours in. It is famous for some mineral springs, and crowded du-ring three or for months of the year with New York and Boston shop-keepors and snobs, dressed within an inch of their lives; women in excess of Parisian fashion, with short sleeves; men in extra Newmarket and had Parisian style, cranmed to the number of three or four thousand in five or six large hotels, breakfasting together, dining together at two o'clock, smirking and flir-ing the whole time. The men smoke all day, swinging in rocking-bairs, and squir-ing tobaco juice between their feet, or over their neighbor's shoulders. The la-dies promenade before them, talking loud and making eyes.—altogether it is the most forced and least natural state of society I ever saw. It is the quintesscence of smob-ing the short sleever, but eat shrimps out of srawberry bottles, and bury them-elves in the sand, because they really em-oly it, and don't care a sixpence what oth-repople think of them; whereas, at Sara-toga, if a lady were tog to dinner in a mora shooting-jacket, public opinion would be so strong against them, that thero out hem."
